opening the doors...

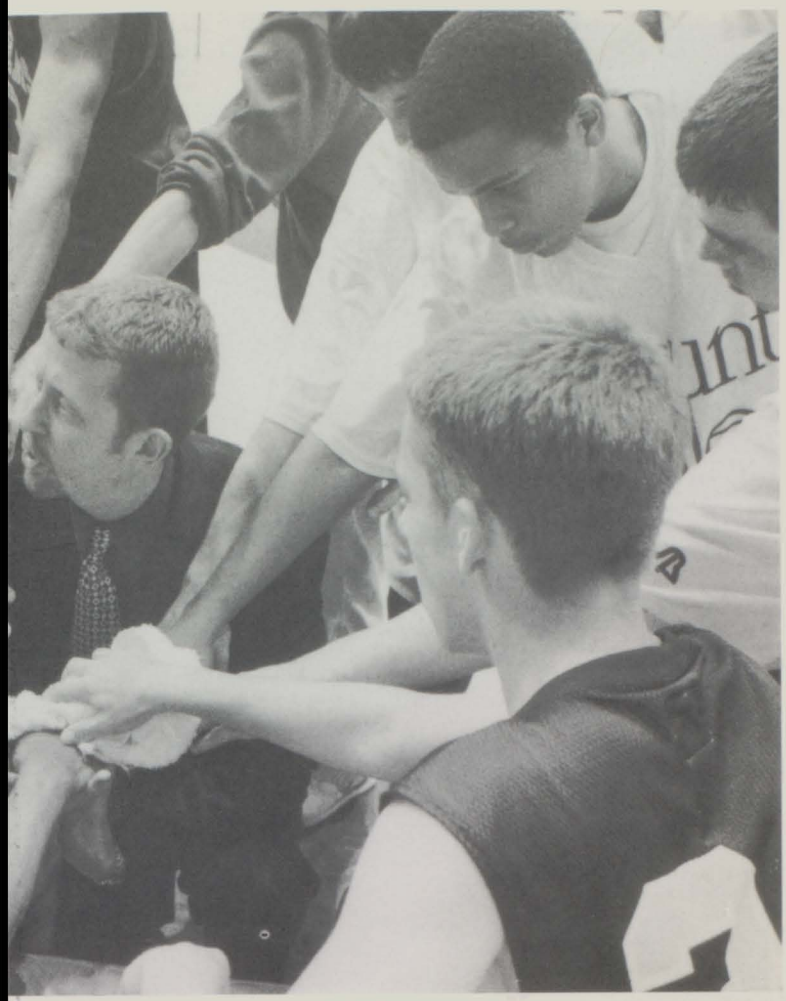

"Remember [this year] for it is the beginning of always."
-Unknown

Who we become and where our lives take us are shaped by who we are and what we do during our teenage school days. Every August brings a new path in the continuing journey of our educations. We wonder what will make this path memorable. Will it be the big game we win or a special friend we meet? Will this be the year we remember our ID's? There are countless opportunities offered to us from August until May, and each is a new door with the potential to change our lives. Choosing to walk through, to accept the challenges offered impacts our futures. And while that future may be a mystery, we can be sure that the doors high school opens for us will be the ones to lead us to incredible destinations.

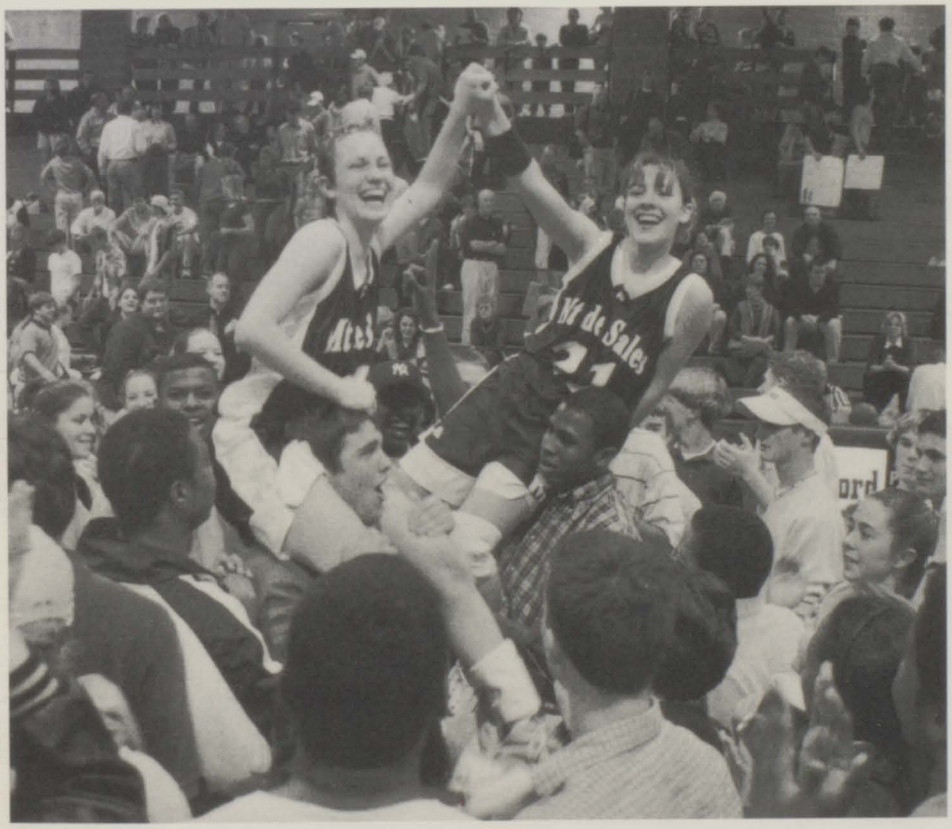

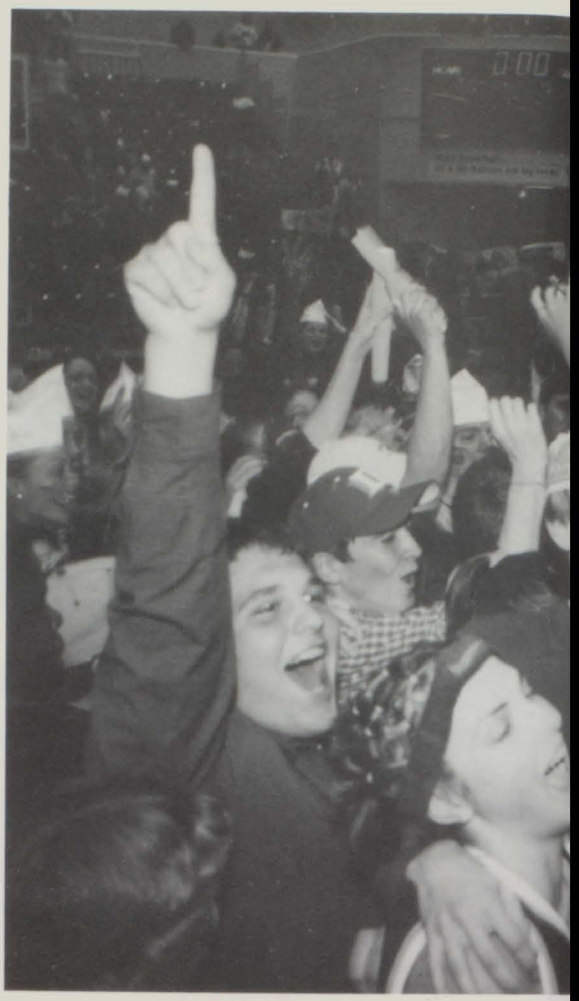

Wonderful events lay in store as the year began, ensuring every student would have an exciting and fun-filled school year.

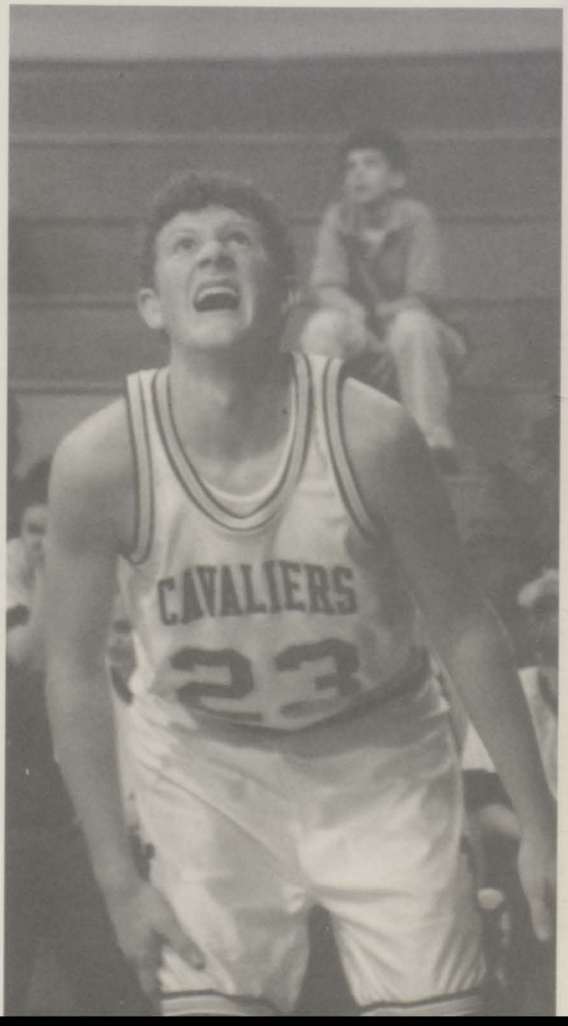

...leading to our destinations

"I haven't a clue as to how my story will end. But that's all right."
-Unknown

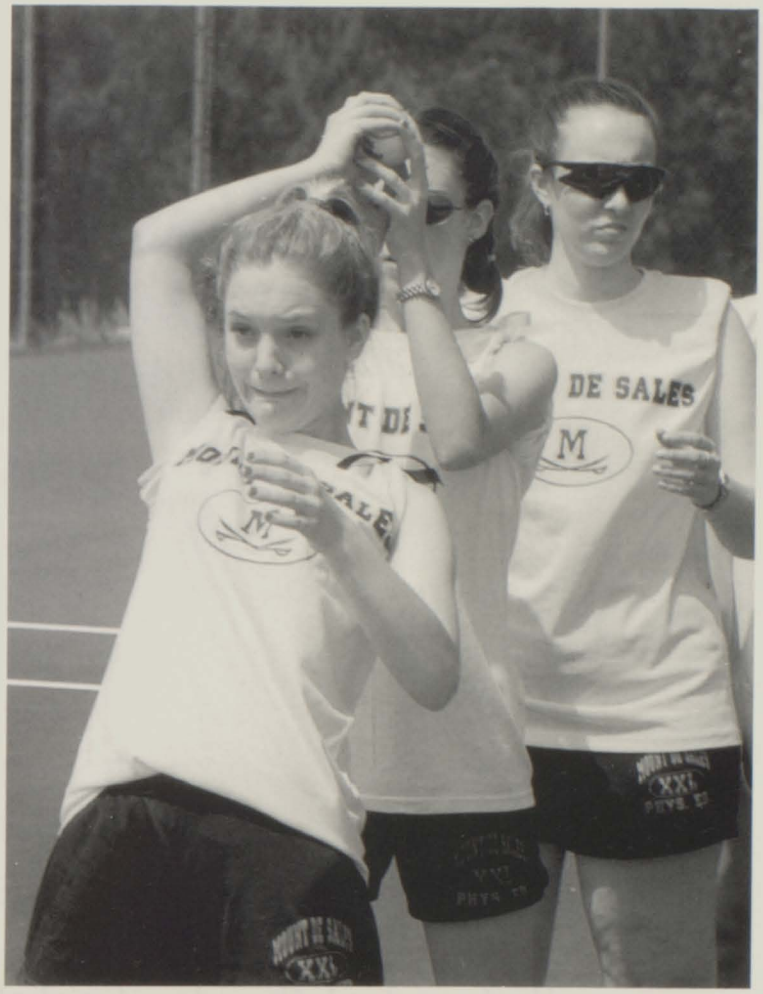

No student can possibly imagine on the first day of school what the year will hold. How could anyone anticipate the excitement of the basketball state playoffs or the success of Hollywood homecoming? As the year progressed, every student journeyed on, filling their minds with knowledge and their days with new experiences. Between classes, friendships, and extracurricular activities every student's plate was filled. Their already busy lives were only enhanced by the many assemblies and activities planned by the administration and the student council. This fierce combination resulted in the exploration of many new destinations.

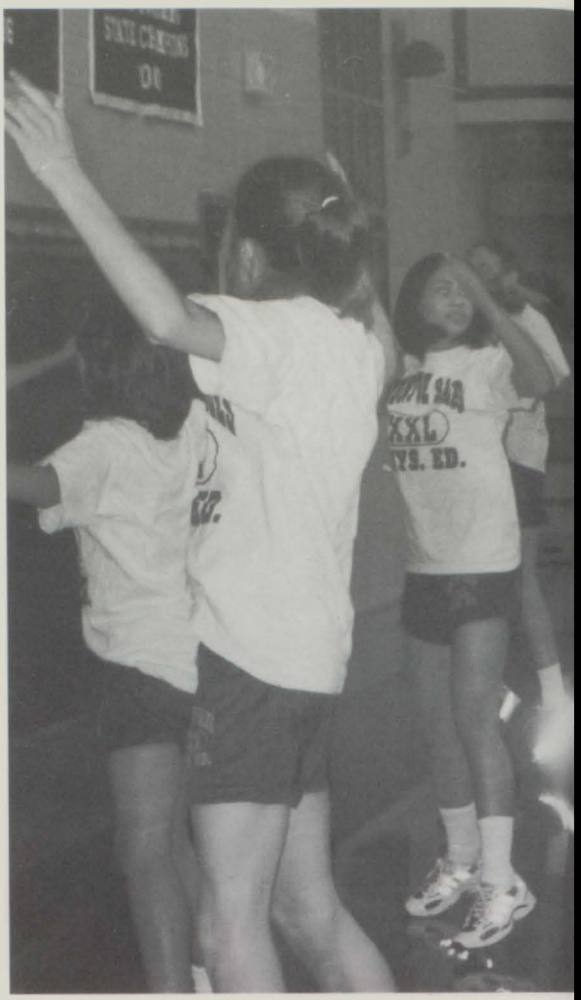

From athletics to spirit to fun, the MDS family shares moment after moment with one another, together reaching their destinations.

mindful of the doorway

"Seeing much, suffering much, and studying much, are the three pillars of learning."
- Disraeli

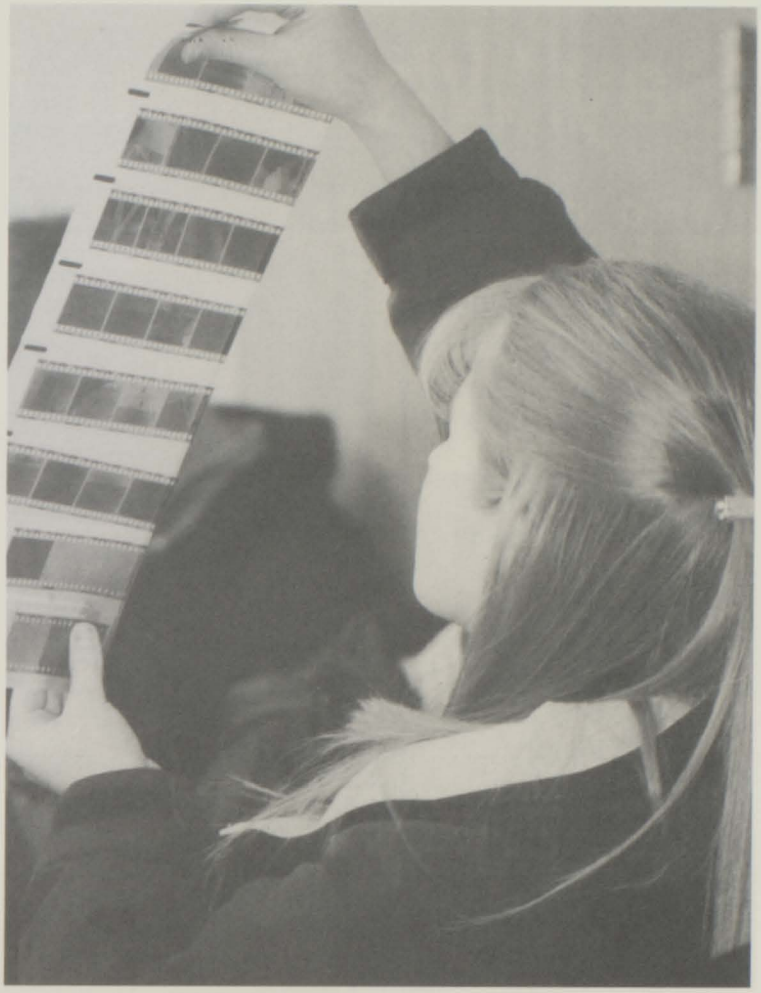

Reading, writing, and 'rithmetic- these are the foundations upon which our educations are based, and yet, learning serves an even greater purpose. Teachers and the subjects in which they specialize are the door-openers to our futures. They are the ones who expand our minds, teaching us not only facts and dates but life's lessons as well. From that early morning calculus class to that end of the day English discussion, academics fill the days with useful tidbits of information, preparing every student for the challenges life holds. The spirit of academics means opening not just our textbooks but also the doors to our minds.

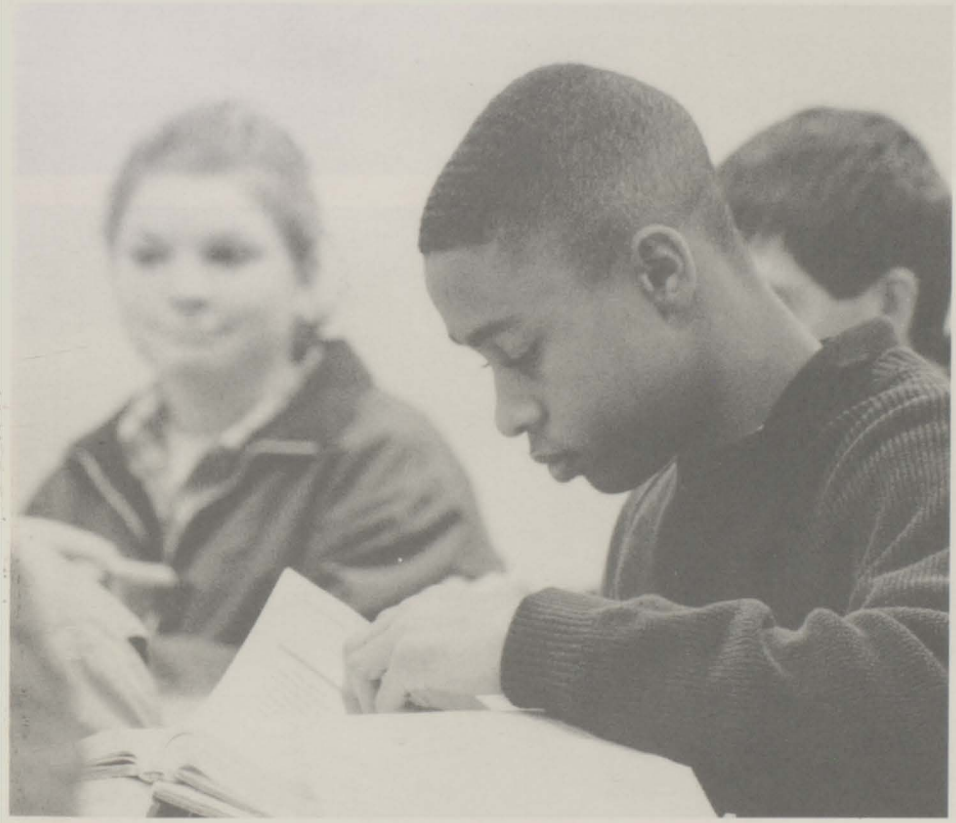

MDS classes come with all the bells and whistles, inspiring people to jump out of their seats and celebrate the different aspects of academic life.

Say What You Mean,

And mean what you say.

The end of a long journey. Senior Nick McClendon turns in his term paper after weeks of strenuous work. Such assignments exemplified the school's reputation for graduating students who were well prepared for college.

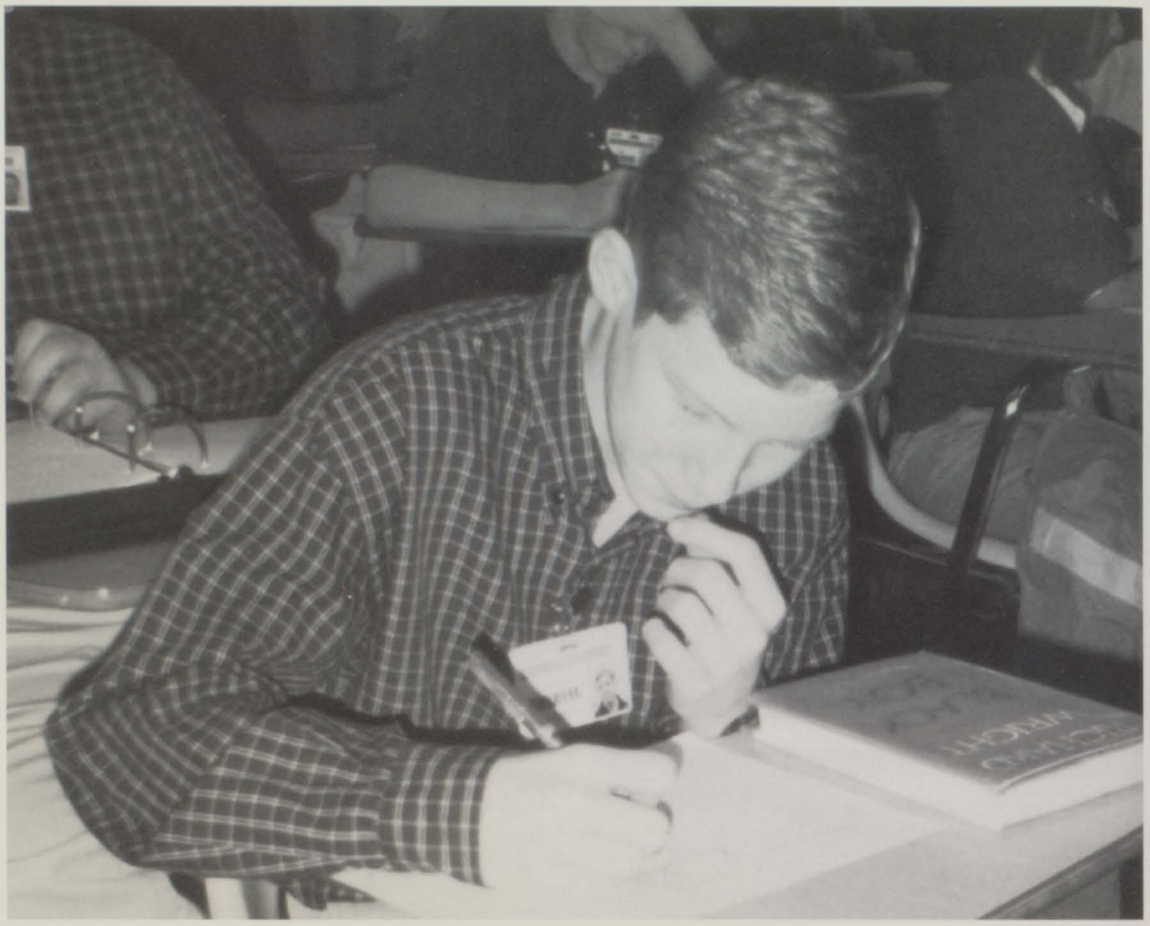

What's Your Favorite Saying?

"No pain, no gain."
- Ashley Harrison
Junior

"Actions speak louder than words."
- Dawn Peterson
Freshman

"A picture is worth a thousand words."
- Karen Marshall
Sophomore

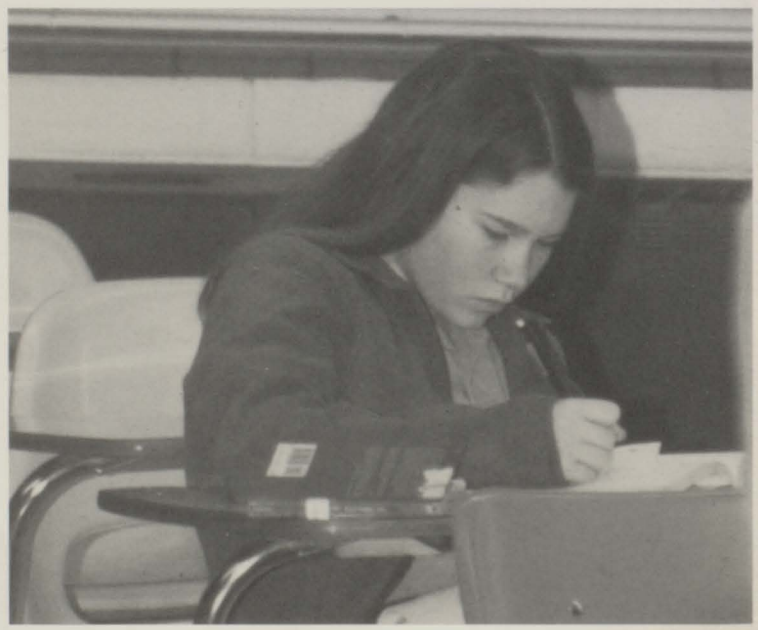

"Great minds think alike."
- John Kipe
Sophomore

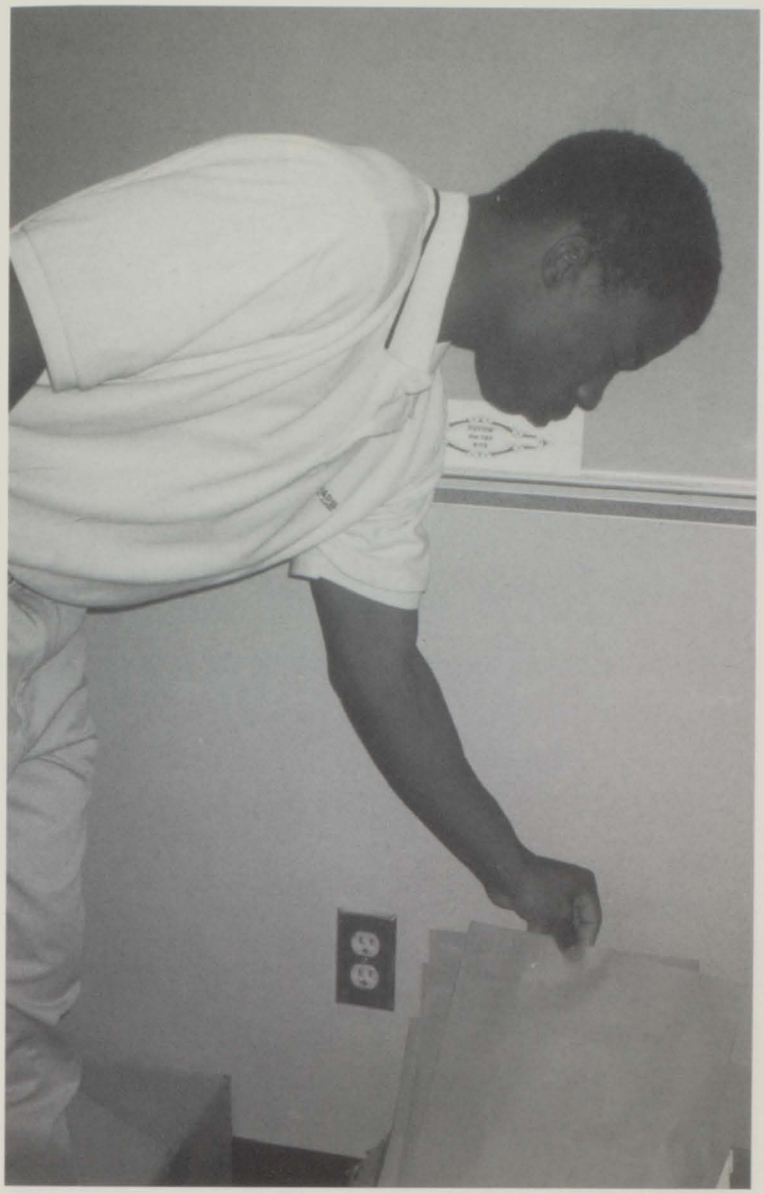

Who is the main character? Eighth grader Patrick Faircloth answers brain-teasing questions about a novel. All middle school students were tested on works of literature as required by the Accelerated Reader program.

How long is this story? Sophomores Whitney Glover and Terence Heenan take advantage of the opportunity to quietly read a story in class. Such opportunities meant less homework and more social activities for that night.

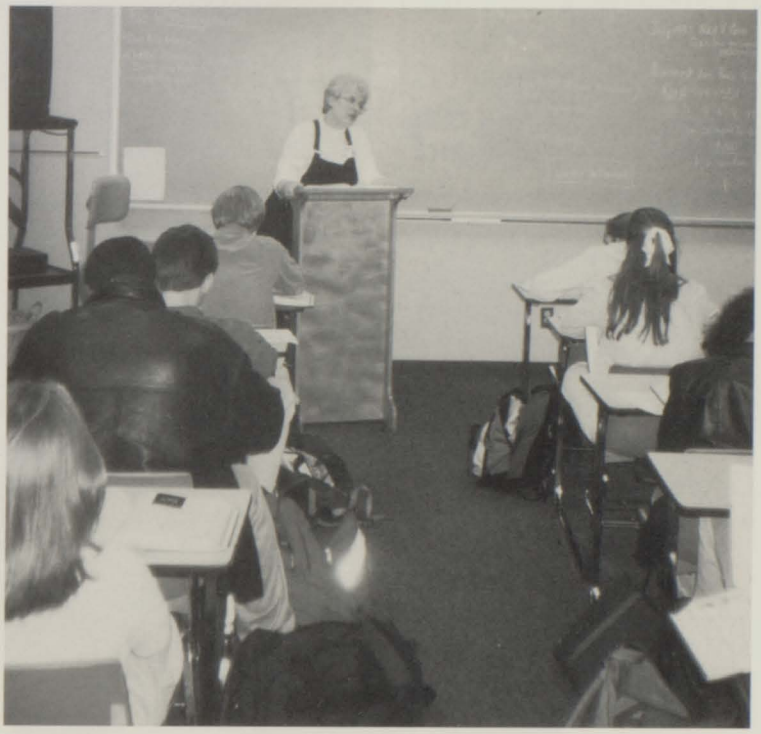

What happened next? Eighth grader Kathryn Young takes notes on a novel in order to prepare for a test. Notetaking was recommended to help follow the plot and attain better understanding of what was being read.

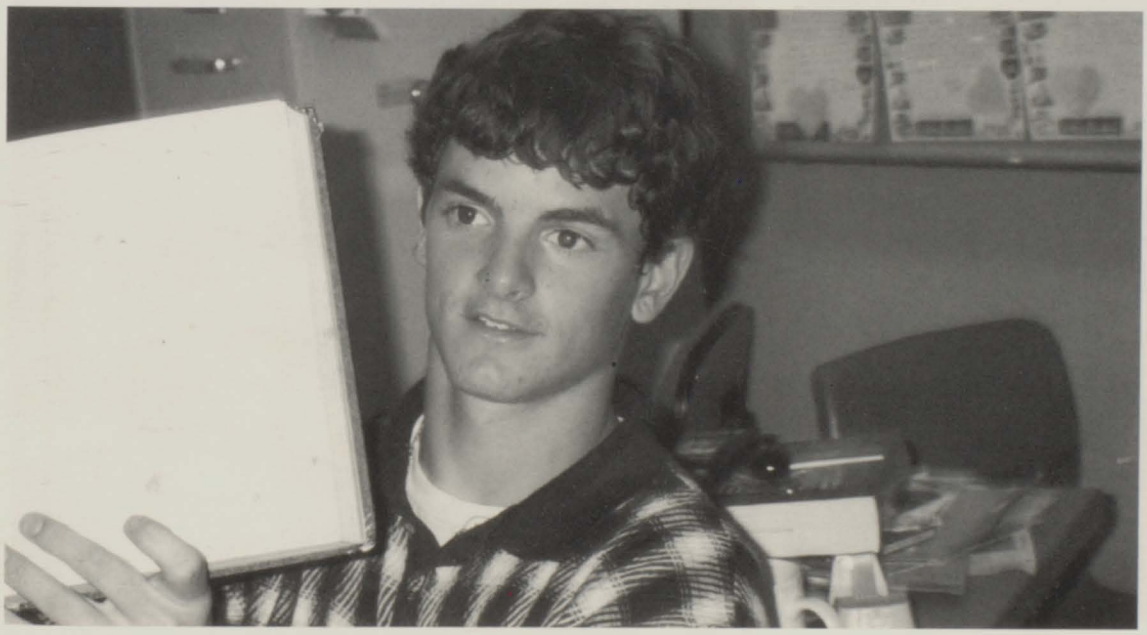

All of a sudden... Freshman Jeannine Olivier reads a novel and is overcome with suspense. English teachers emphasized such aspects of literature to help the students fully appreciate the joys and pleasures of reading.

Let me explain. Sophomore English teacher Mrs. Tate explains a passage from the play "Julius Caesar." She always insisted that her students support their opinions with evidence from the story.

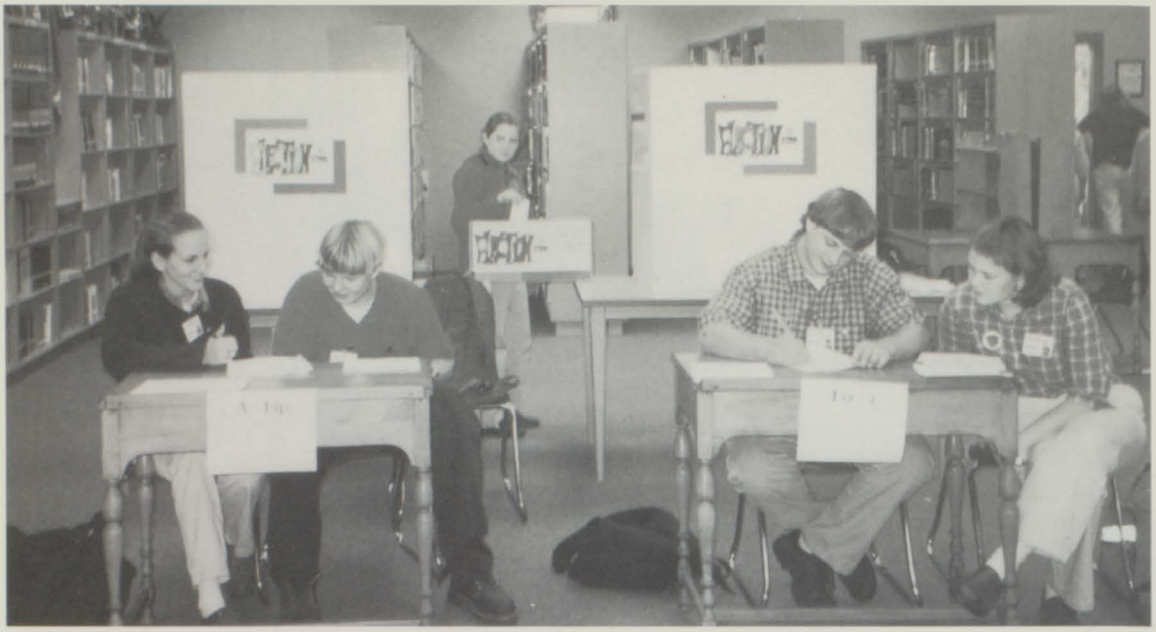

I can't believe he said that! Freshman Danielle Grinstead is shocked by a statement made in English class. Such classes allowed young imaginations to run free and grabbed the attention of many by providing memorable discussions.

Is this the right page? Freshman Erik Hardison confirms the instructions for a homework assignment by showing his book for all to see. Teachers urged students to be attentive during classes as a means to excel academically.

I demand a recount! A group of senior election officials waits by the polls to help students figure out the school's confusing ballot. Despite the controversy, the mock election turned out George W. Bush as the clear winner.

You've got to be kidding me! Mr. Massey corrects a stack of AP American history tests during a much needed break from the class. Sometimes the essays the students wrote tended to be a bit on the wild side.

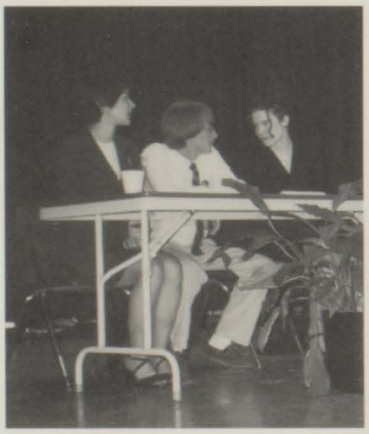

Everything on this table has potatoes in it! Seventh graders Lee Discher, Ryan Liedle, and Michael Hughes sample an array of Russian foods during geography class. The students enjoyed the opportunity to try new dishes as well as eat in class.

The next question goes to Mr. Gore. Seniors Georgia Ragonetti, Lanier Sammons, and Jenny Paschke take on the role of the Gore camp during a mock presidential debate. The activity added realism to the educational election.

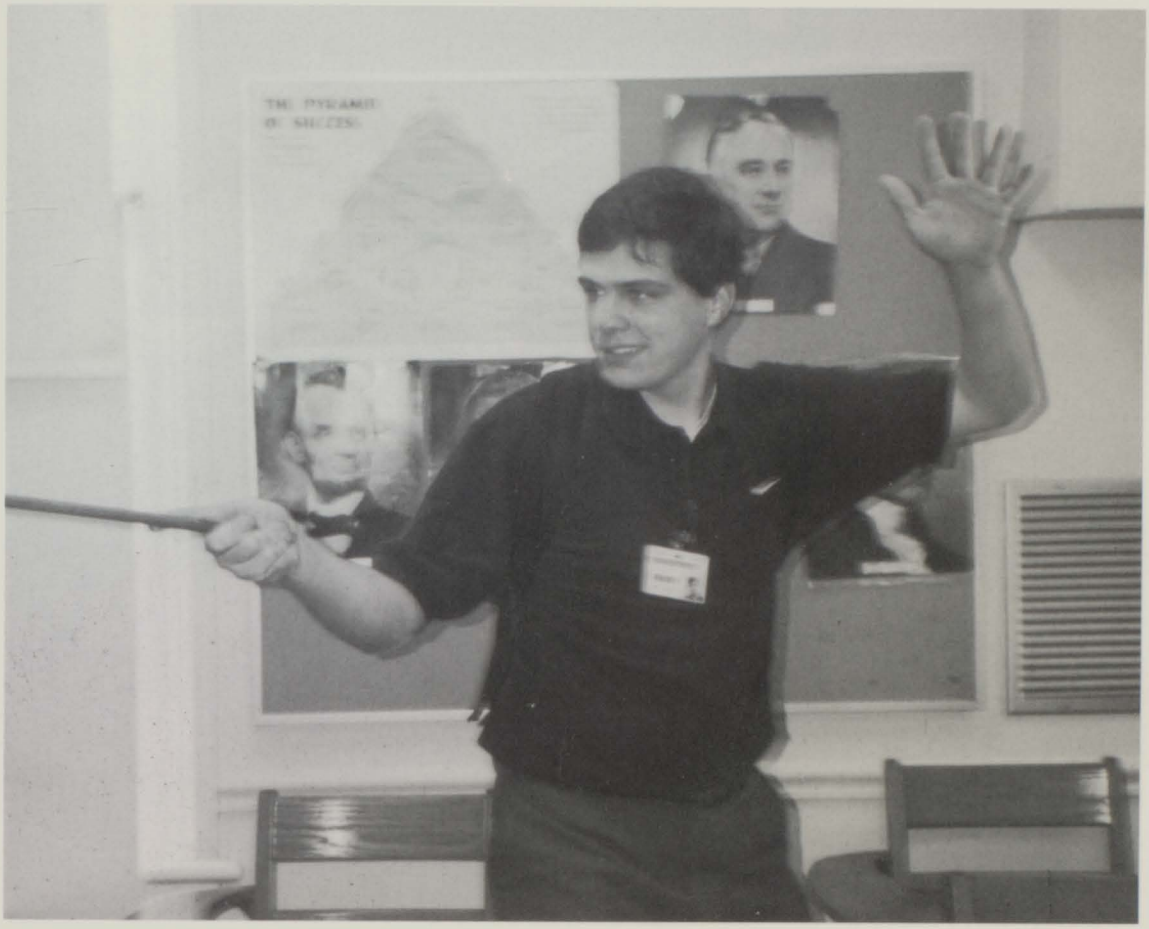

Doors to the Past

Social studies gives students the chance to learn about their histories.

Halt, who goes there? Senior Sean Caulfield pretends he is a famous swordsman during AP U.S. history class. The small class of seven seniors enjoyed themselves throughout the year while learning a great deal about the subject.

Top Reasons the MDS election process is better than the national election:

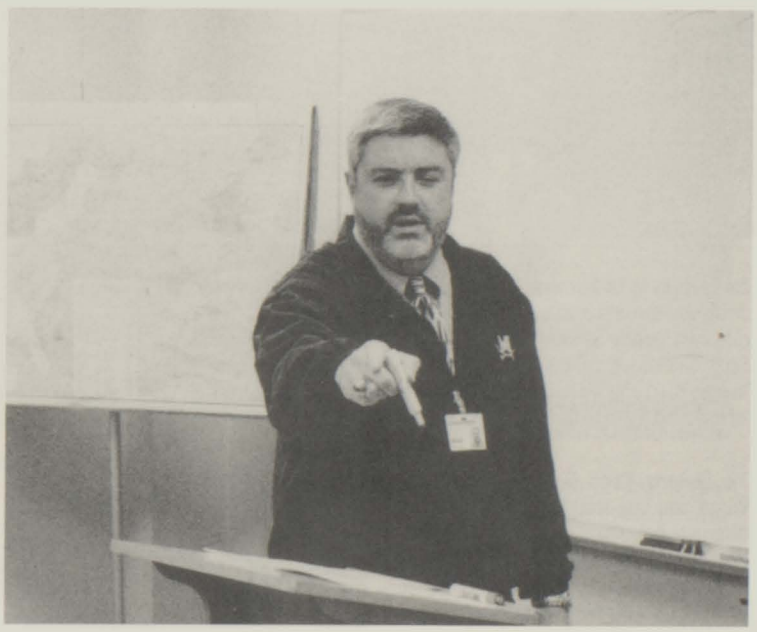

1) Mr. Davis can come in third place overall.
2) There is no such thing as a butterfly ballot.
3) Results are announced within a day of voting.
4) There is no endless, annoying media coverage of the recounts.
5) A clear, defined winner really means a clear, defined winner.
6) No Electoral College

Sit down and be quiet. Coach Smith raises his voice and points his finger at students during world history class. Coaching skills often came in handy when refereeing review games.

There stands Jackson like a stonewall. A group of middle schoolers studies a collection of dioramas from Civil War battles. The project gave the students the chance to show creativity as well as their knowledge of the period.

The bulls and the bears. Seniors Sarah Harrison and David Rumph concentrate on what stocks to buy and sell. The Stock Market Game gave the economics classes the chance to invest 100,000 imaginary dollars in companies they chose.

Different Strokes

The foreign language classes learn the world is exciting and diverse.

Hey, this question is easy! Tenth grader Camille Dizon eagerly raises her hand during French class to show off her superior knowledge. Foreign language classes were a favorite of students because of their interactive activities.

Key Phrases While Traveling Abroad

1. Where is the bathroom?
¿Dónde está el baño?
Où sont les toilettes?
2.How much for a good lawyer?
¿Cuánto debo pagar para un buen abogado?
Combien est-ce qu'on paie pour un bon avocat?
3. Where can I find french fries?
¿Dónde puedo encontrar papas fritas?
Où est-ce que je peux trouver des fritas?
4. Is the water safe to drink?
¿Es que se puede tomar el agua?
Est-ce qu'on peut boire de l'eau ici?
5. Which way to America?
¿Dónde está América?
Où se trouve l' Amérique?

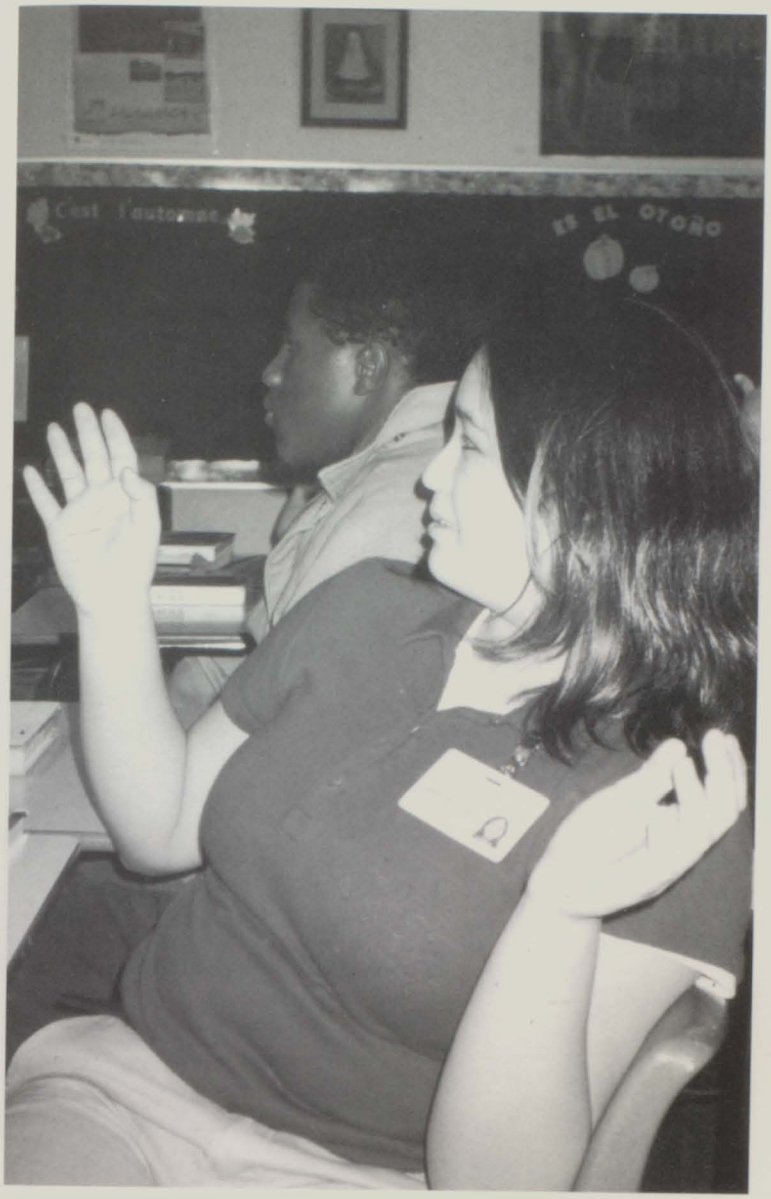

Did they just say what I think they just said? A group of underclassmen anxiously await the arrival of the visiting French students. The visitors helped the foreign language classses learn more about their culture.

La la la la la la bamba! Tenth grader Josh Adams serenades the Spanish class by gently strumming his guitar. Spanish class taught students not only how to read and write Spanish, but also introduced them to the Spanish culture.

Yo Quiero Taco Bell. Juniors Laura Wood and Lea Hattaway discuss their after school plans during seventh period Spanish IV class. The last class of the day always caused students to think about what they were doing afterwards.

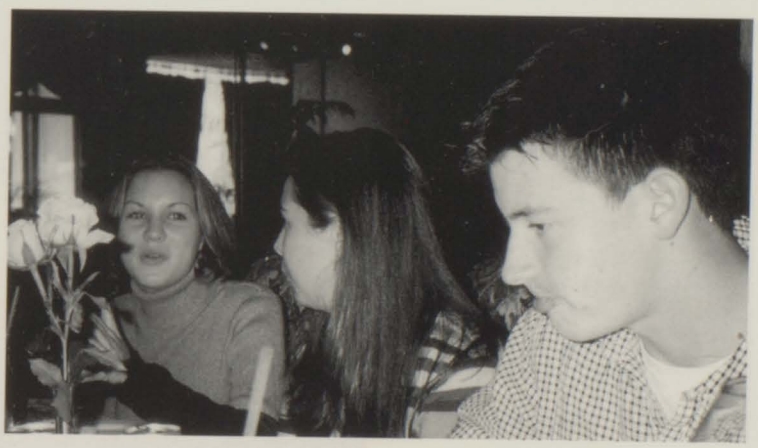

France sure is beautiful. Sophomore Sara Dessart passes around a picture of a famous French monument to fellow classmate Nneka Nwosu. The sights of Paris have always inspired the French students to learn.

Tu nombre es Audra? Mi Nombre es Audra! Sophomore Audra Nessing asks for assistance from junior Audra Orange in translating some hard Spanish sentences. Audra and Audra not only shared a name, but also an interest in Spanish.

That last poem was really sweet. Sophomores Ashley Stokes, Solomon Sewell, and Agon Kabashi discuss the events of the Oratorical Competition. The day long activity included the presentation of poems in both Spanish and French.

This sure beats cafeteria food. Sophomores Jennifer Oliver, Theresa Jurgensen, and Andy Graves enjoy fine dining at Le Lavandier. The students got to experience a taste of authentic French food in the environment of a French restaurant.

One in the Spirit

Religion classes lead students through the doors of spirituality.

Excuse me, but how do you... Senior Devin Cooper raises his hand during class, confused on how to perform a t'ai chi move. T'ai chi is an ancient martial art practiced by many, including Mrs. Brown's class.

Top 10 movies watched in the religion classes.

1. Remember the Titans
2. Rain Man
3. Jerry Maguire
4. Field of Dreams
5. Lean on Me
6. Stand by Me
7. Dead Man Walking
8. Phenomenon
9. The Green Mile
10. Philadelphia

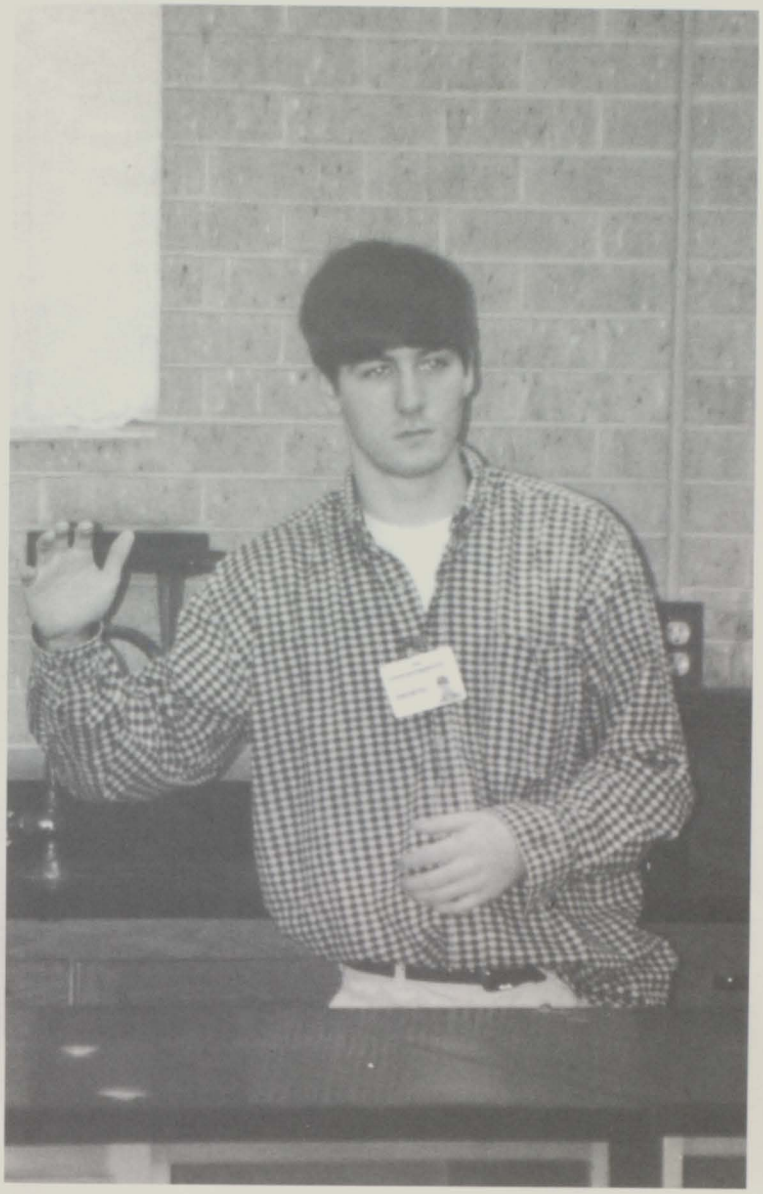

I feel so relaxed, I could stay here forever. Junior Jason Glow calmly practices yoga during Mrs. Brown's world religions class. Meditation was looked forward to by all to help alleviate stress and strain.

Please pass the bread. Senior Evan Demere passes the loaf of bread on to senior Land Bonner. Many different kinds of bread were offered in Ms. Kirksey's class, including delicious sourdough bread.

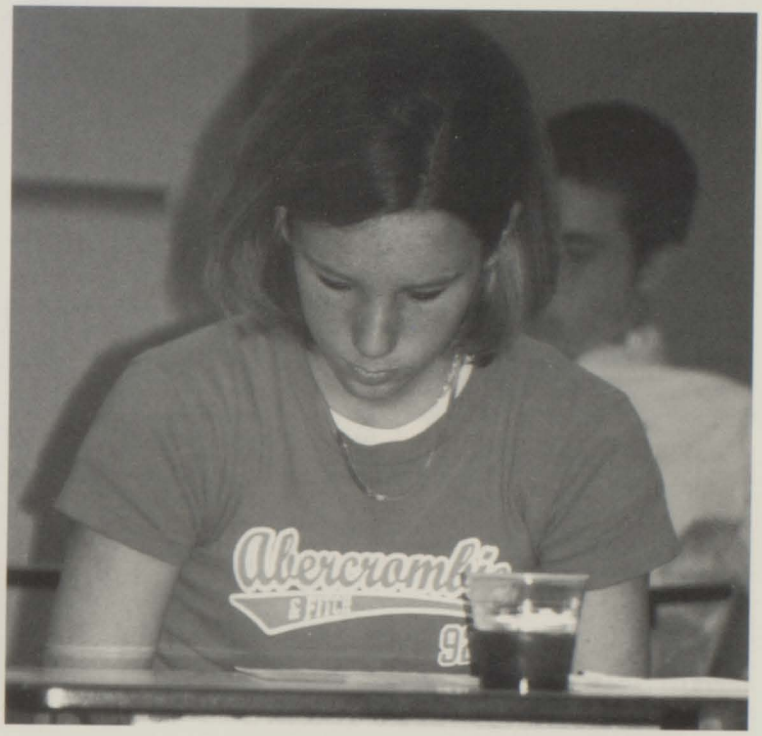

Wash on, wash off. Juniors Laura Wood and Kristen Salinas wash each others hands as a ritual in the breaking of the bread. Students drank grape juice and ate bread, during this activity to commemorate the Last Supper.

This stuff is not that hard... Seniors Madhu Adiga and Nick Miklowski perform t'ai chi moves with ease and a smile. T'ai chi and meditation were practiced by Mrs. Brown's world religion class while studying Taoism.

So when do we get to drink this grape juice? Junior Sarah Harmon follows the prayer reading, anxiously waiting to enjoy the juice. The Holy Thursday ceremony was re-enacted by all of Ms. Kirksey's religion classes.

Assignments, assignments... Sophomores John Lewis and Adrianne Howard work on the assignment at hand in an attempt to finish before the bell rings. Religion was often fun and exciting, but sometimes hard work was required.

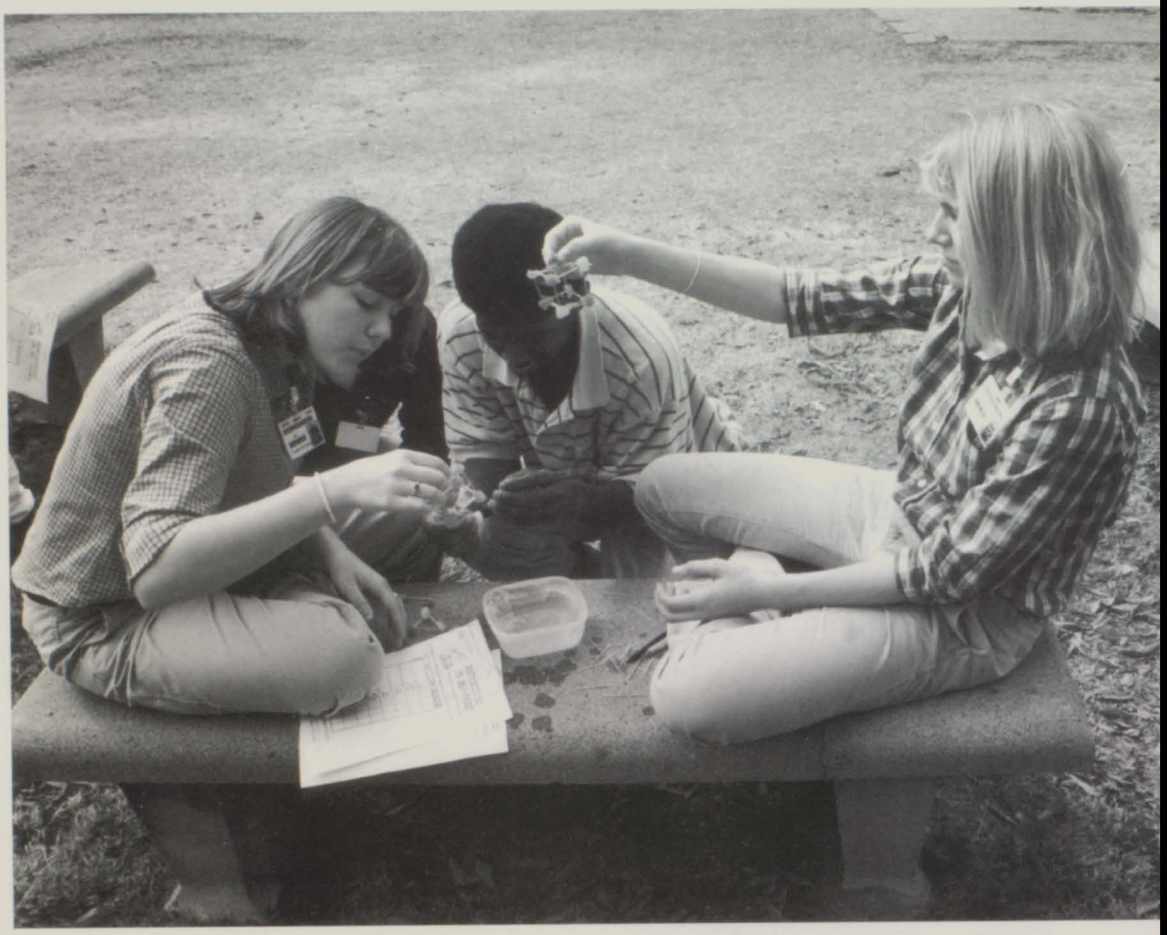

Is there anything else on your mind? Seventh graders listen as Father Tim answers questions about Catholicism. The presence of Father Tim on campus provided a real life perspective on the Catholic faith.

A Way With Numbers

Algebra, geometry, and calculus change the meaning of the phrase.

Get off my planet! Eighth graders Carla Martinez and Barry Blitch fight off an alien invasion during math class. Often, when teachers gave free time at the end of class, students used their calculators to help save the world.

Negative B, plus or minus radical B squared, minus four AC...all over two A. No one can forget the catchy tunes of the Quadratic Equation Song played in Mr. Lipson's class. Whenever he breaks out the tape, the students smile and sing along while they learn. It is fun things like this that make math class enjoyable. While they may not always be traditional, unique ways of learning are what teaches students the best. Outside activities such as Math Day and the Math Team are also important to students who want to perform well in math. These opportunities provide students the chance to expand their math skills and have fun with friends as well.

Goody, goody gum-drops! Eighth graders Nahshan Bigham, Trudy Rowland, and Mary Montgomery take a mini field trip to build geometric figures in the trapezoid. The best part was eating them all at the end.

Now divide by the square root of 25. Mrs. Lockhart instructs her students on the day's geometry lesson. Learning the basics of shapes and angles got students ready for the challenges of calculus and trigonometry.

Saved by the bell. Senior Math Team members Jayme Potts and Janelle Joe are relieved from a difficult test by the bell signaling the end of the activity period. The Math Team gave them the chance to learn in a different setting.

Math Day

The high school Math Day was a great opportunity for students to expand their math skills outside of the classroom. The day started with an individual test for each student. That was not considered fun, but afterwards the day only got better. During lunch, teams worked on "Math Munchies" which were problems designed to have them work as a group. Afterwards, members of each team competed with others of their own level to earn points that would decide the winner.

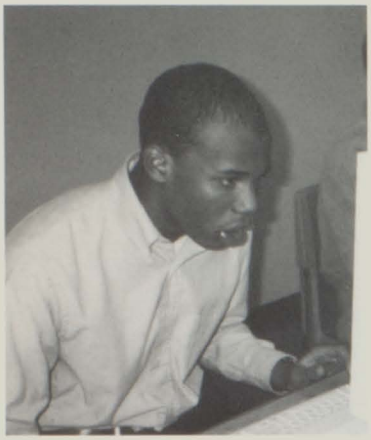

They are never going to get this one. Mr. Lipson smiles as he presents the next problem to Math Day participants. He knew that this would be the problem that would stump the talented students.

Hurry, hurry, we only have 30 seconds left. Junior Kristin Taylor and senior Georgia Ragonetti rush to finish a timed problem. Teams had limited time to finish several hard questions.

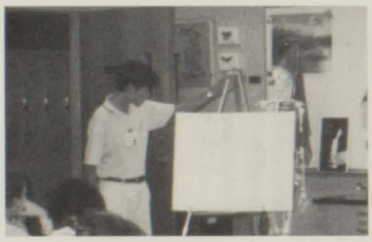

Oops, I did it again. Senior Justin Bundrage stares blankly at the computer screen, wondering how to fix the website on which he is working. Technical difficulties were a common problem among web design students.

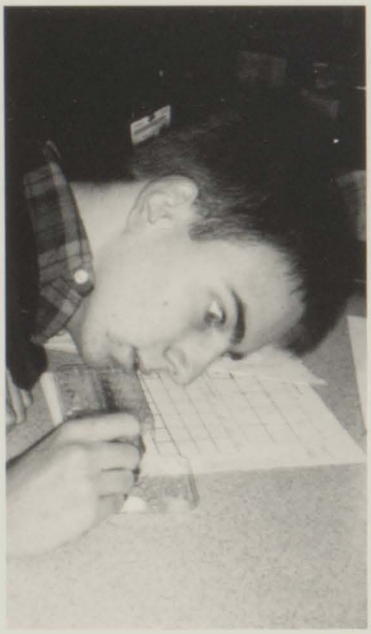

DNA: The building blocks of life. Mrs. Dermatas' A.P. biology class proudly displays the model of DNA they have created. The class may have been small, but they learned a lot and had loads of fun while doing it.

Now, does anyone have any questions? Sophomore Brandon Logue finishes up a talk in biology class. Mrs. Dermatas required all of her students to work together and make presentations on various scientific subjects.

Wow, who knew baking soda could do THAT! Junior chemistry student Allen Stroupe is dumbstruck by the chemical properties of some substances. The labs in chemistry always produced similar results.

Double, double, toil and trouble. Mrs. Gilbert works with physical science students Zubo Onuora and Wesley Moulton on a very interesting experiment. The teacher's guidance is key to the successful completion of the lab.

School Wizards

Science and Technology students learn about the world around them.

When we think of science and technology, we don't think of people like Albert Einstein or Bill Gates. Instead, we think of Mr. Mac making his "jokes," or Mr. Rule arguing about how his IMac is better than any PC. The world is becoming more technologically oriented, and the school refuses to be left behind. Like most colleges, there is an extensive website describing the school, email addresses for all of the students, as well as a TV-station to broadcast all over campus. The Science Department is also one of the best in the area. Students learn biology, chemistry, and physics from qualified and talented teachers in the three labs that are located around campus.

Twinkle, twinkle little star, how I wonder what you are. Mrs. Brown takes the chance to gaze through the telescope Mr. Mac set up. Even teachers were amazed as they observed Saturn, Jupiter, and the moon in the fall sky.

Abort, Retry, Fail? Eighth graders Eleni Dermatas, Emily Walsh, and Luke Mummert learn about the school's new IMacs while in Mr. Rule's computer class. New computers can be frustrating for those who are not used to them.

On your mark, get set, GO! Senior physics students Daniel Castresana and Carl Garofalo get ready to start the clock on the latest lab assigned by Mr. Mac. Students looked forward to lab days as a break from regular classwork.

Artistic License

Rookie and veteran art students exercise their right to create.

Don't be so negative! Sophomore Amanda Koplin diligently works on her photography task in hopes of finishing by the end of the day. This class gives students the opportunity to capture the world around them on film.

The aroma of freshly opened paint and wet clay knocks you off your feet as you enter art class. Everyday, Mrs. Mead helps mold future artists, teaching techniques and encouraging creativity. Throughout the year, these aspiring artists are given the opportunity to exhibit their work on campus in the Knott Library as well as in various studios across the state. Over the course of their classes, students venture into a wide variety of art forms, expanding their artistic interests. Senior photography student Justin Schuchmann observes, "Photography is more than just a photography class, we explore composition and other art features."

It's either now or never! Sophomore Will Young encourages himself to start on the latest project Mrs. Mead has given him. If students do not do their work in class, it is reflected in their semester grades.

In our own backyards. Junior Kristen Croom creates a work of art while in the Sheridan Hall Breezeway. Spending time outside of the art room helps students focus, allowing them to produce the best work possible.

Rubber Duckie, you're the one... The duck creation of another student inspires Marissa Scott. A wide variety of past projects and paintings decorate the walls and provide a little bit of color and life to the art room.

Rulers make much better straight edges than I.D.'s. Sophomore Lindsey Pie learns that traditional school supplies can be more helpful than the instruments they have grown more accustomed to using.

Get the picture? Junior Chris Putnam tests to see if art students Tyler Cook and Colby Mayers understand the drawing he has made. Working in groups allows the artists to give advice and criticism to each other.

And one, and two... Mrs. Washburn conducts the choir as they rehearse songs for an upcoming program. The choir practiced very diligently since they were sometimes asked to perform at a moment's notice.

Louie, Louie! The Cavalier Band performs a song for the audience during the half-time of a home football game. The band performed a number of times in front of both cheering Cavalier fans as well as their opponents.

Spring Sing

That kid's got some moves. Sophomore John-David Pinkston demonstrates his talents on the drums. The Spring Sing let students show off both their musical and instrumental talents to the school.

Reunited and it feels so good. The chorus performs a song dedicated to love. The event consisted of the chorus as a whole, boys and girls singing separately, and several solo performances.

Spring Sing was dedicated to something that is near and dear to everyone's hearts: Love: The school tradition began with selections from the Middle School chorus and the Cavalier Band. The High School chorus then treated the audience to a medley of songs about various aspects of love. Finally, the audience enjoyed a collection of solos which were performed to wish the seniors well in the future. The whole concert was accented by stone walls with names of school couples written inside of red hearts.

I've lost my beautiful singing voice! Seniors Terri Tyson and Kate Haney prepare for an ensemble performance at a Cherry Blossom event. The festival allowed the students to share their talents with the entire community.

Music to my Ears

Students learn the art of music from Chorus, Band, and Keyboarding

Top Ten Favorite Songs Sung in Chorus:

1) Stand By Me
2) Just My Imagination
3) Swinging With the Saints
4) All I Ask of You
5) All My Trials
6) I Hear a Voice
7) Carol of the Bells
8) When Will I Be Loved?
9) Come Go With Me
10) Listen to the Music

Da, da, da, dum... Freshman Victoria Anderson and junior Lee Matthews have fun experimenting with different songs on the keyboard. The new class introduced students to the piano and gave them a form of music to learn other than vocal performance.

No Small Parts...

The Troubadours impress and entertain friends and family alike.

Wake up, it's your line. Senior Kirk Davenport tries to awaken junior Sarah Burch during a Saturday dress rehearsal. Every Saturday morning, the cast of Arsenic and Old Lace got up early for much needed practices in the gym.

Cast Lists

The Omelet Murder Case

Shake Speare-John Hurley
Gertrude-Mary Heenan
Miss Marlowe-Georgia Ragonetti
Claude-Justin Channel
Hamlet-Terence Heenan
Ophelia-Katie Wright
Rosa Stern-Michelle Bentley
Gilda Stern-Winslow Rumph

Arsenic and Old Lace

Aunt Abby-Sarah Burch
Aunt Martha-Flo Bivens
Mortimer-Terence Heenan
Elaine-India Anderson
Jonathan-Chad Folsom
Dr. Einstein-Daniel Harris
Teddy-Matt Lorge
Officer O'Hara-John Hurley
Lt. Ronney-Kristin Taylor
Klein-Allison Ducoté
Brophy-Justin Bundrage
Mr. Witherspoon-Camille Dizon
Rev. Dr. Harper-Kirk Davenport
Mr. Gibbs-Elizabeth Meriwether

And now, we'll finish the story. Senior Chad Folsom prepares to deal with sophomore Terence Heenan's character once and for all. Arsenic and Old Lace's Mortimer and Jonathan were brothers with a slight case of sibling rivalry.

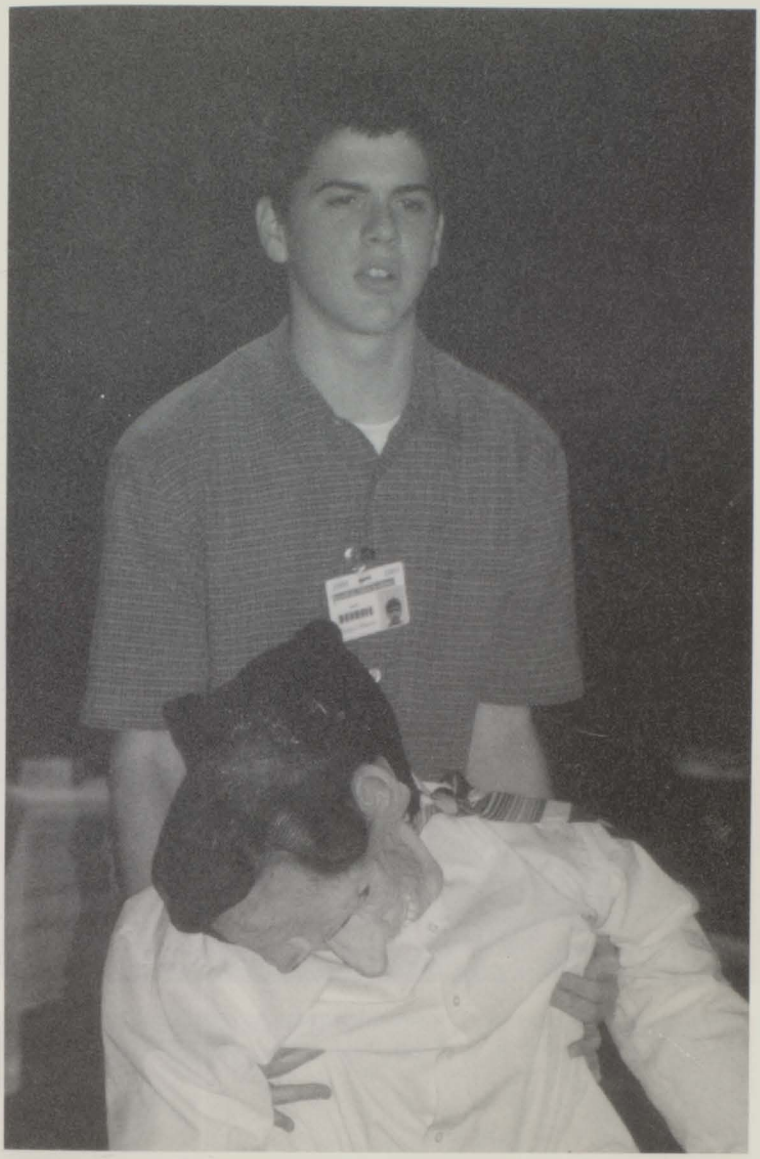

We're ready for our closeup, Mr. de Mille. Ms. Heenan joins a group of seniors for a break during the International Thespian Conference. The weekend long event included plays put on by other schools as well as informative workshops.

We're opening a boutique-importe cheeses. Senior Michelle Bentley and fres man Winslow Rumph perform as Gilda an Rosa Stern. The Omelet Murder Case had a the ingredients of a Shakespearian traged with a small dash of comedy mixed in.

Where do I put this? Following a hilarious scene involving a dead body, freshman Daniel Harris wonders where to place his prop. Arsenic and Old Lace told the story of murderous aunts who killed old men as part of their "charities."

His name is Hamlet, not Omelet, HAMLET! Sophomore Justin Channel informs senior John "Shake Speare" Hurley of his nephew's true name. The Omelet Murder Case revolved around a bumbling and sometimes deaf detective.

The Troubadours had an exciting and laughter-filled season. The actors began by performing The Omelet Murder Case for the One Act Play Competition in November. The play came in third place in the region and was a big hit among the student body. Demand was so high, a special assembly was held to show it to the entire school. Once the play was completed, the actors started work on Arsenic and Old Lace. One of the longest plays MDS has done, it lasted three acts and took over three months to learn. During this rehearsal time, Ms. Heenan, five seniors, and one sophomore attended the State Thespian Conference. Here they learned new skills to bring back to the new actors as well as rest of the troupe.

Sometimes, what I do in acting is better than real life.
- Senior John Hurley

Drama is really fun, and Ms. Heenan is a great teacher.

I had fun during my last year of drama and will miss it.
-Senior Mary Heenan

Impossible Things

are happening everyday.

But the world is full of zanies and fools... Freshmen actors Winslow Rumph and Mandy Thomas star as Cinderella and the Fairy Godmother. Their beautiful singing voices amazed the audience on numerous occasions.

For the first time in two years, the Mount de Sales Drama and Music departments came together to put on a spring musical. The production was none other than the classic Rogers and Hammerstein's tale of Cinderella. The story was brought to life in only five weeks thanks to the hard work and dedication of both the cast and the crew. The show's cast was made up of dozens of students from the middle school to the 12th grade. The long hours everyone put in paid off in one of the most successful plays in the school's history. Both the wonderful singing and talented acting brought praise from students' families and friends.

The Prince is giving a ball! Senior Nick Brown takes on the role of the Herald, making a royal proclamation to the townspeople. The show's opening number was spectacular, capturing everyone's attention early in the play.

Cinderella's no help at all-a very disorganized girl. Senior Georgia Ragonetti gets ready for the ball as Cinderella's stepmother. Fellow seniors Mary Heenan and Michelle Bentley contributed to the production as her two spoiled daughters.

Only a few hundred more stones to go. Freshman Danielle Grinstead does double duty as a townsperson and one of the show's stage crew. With the help of alumnus John Zebell, the crew constructed one of the best sets ever at MDS.

Competing is Good,

but winning is better.

Oh yesterday... The male literary quartet smiles as they receive their plaques at the region literary meet at Macon State. The quartet won first place in region by singing the Beatles song, "Yesterday."

The 2001 literary team included a variety of talented people who used their gifts in a variety of ways. Students had the opportunity to showcase their skills in public speaking, essay writing, and musical performance. Literary day began at the school level and demanded many practices leading up to the school competitions. The winners from each of these events continued on to the region literary competition. Then, the top two winners in every category continued on to the state level, where the competition really got tough. The MDS literary teams defeated all the other schools to finish in first place in the state. What an excellent way to finish-on top!

Joyful, joyful... Seniors Jayme Potts and Natalie Andrews smile to show their excitement at winning first place for the girls trio. The literary team did an excellent job in all categories from spelling to singing and even public speaking.

How do you spell that word again? Senior Candace Harrington ponders a word during the spelling test for the school-wide literary day. Spelling difficult words was a challenge for some, but Candace made it look easy.

Playing Time

Students challenge their bodies as opposed to their minds.

The smell of the gym locker-room, the sound of the coach's whistle, the ten laps run around the gym- these familiar memories of P.E. are the ones that survive the test of time. They are the ones that years from now upon reflection will cause the laughs and the smiles.Gym class offers each student something different. For some, it is a chance to breathe in fresh air, for others a time to let out pent up energy. Yet, for others P.E. is simply a chance to relax and "play ball." Whatever the source of their enjoyment may be, students agree that P.E. is a welcome shift from mental to more physical rigors. A fun and enjoyable experience headed by caring and well-trained coaches, P.E. can truly be called one of the most memorable aspects of a student's career.

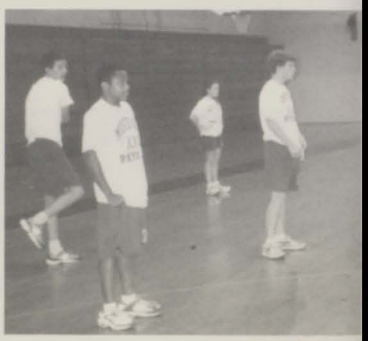

Quick, someone call it ... Seniors Rashad Tharpe and Justin Trentadue rush for the ball during their third period gym class. At times, volleyball was one of the most intense games in which the boys participated.

Give it all you got... Seventh grader Elizabeth Gaughf stretches before her P.E class starts. Every class began with several minutes of strenuous warm up exercises that prepared the students for the day's vigorous activities.

A star on the rise... Seventh grader Lauren Faulkner demonstrates her exceptional basketball skills during her fifth period gym class. P.E. is a wonderful opportunity for students to improve their athletic skills.

Still waiting for the serve ... These members of the third period P.E. class wait expectantly for their opponents to serve the ball. While volleyball can be a very competitive sport, it was also one of the student's favorite activities.

Creating Memories

The Yearbook Staff opens up doors to our future destinations.

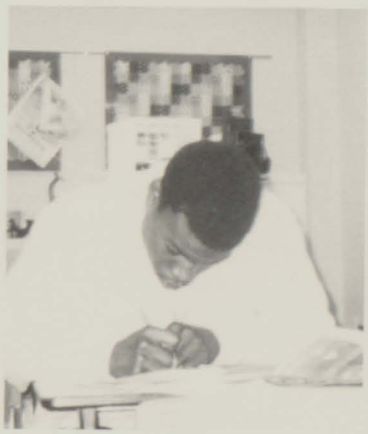

Getting the job done.. Crystle Roberson, Jenny Paschke, Mrs. Brown, and Ashley Spillers work diligently sorting through pictures for one of many layouts in the next volume of the yearbook.

They meet everyday during seventh period, stay after school completing layouts, and work hard to meet deadlines. These are the people who hide behind the pages of the Mount de Sales Salesian. They take the pictures, tell the stories, and try to capture as many of the memories as possible. The staff is composed of dedicated students from grades seven through twelve. Under the leadership of section editors and editor Jenny Paschke, the staff has tried to create an annual that is not only pleasing to the eye, but one that opens the door to memories as well.

8 picas here, 9 picas there...Senior Nick McClendon works feverishly to complete a layout for a deadline. Deadlines were always a hectic time for staff members when they had to work together to get things done.

I spy with my little eye, an I-Book... Julia Brost-Clarke and Elizabeth Mason sort through headings for just the right one on this year's new I-Book computers. Two creative yearbook workers are always better than one.

On the Threshold

On the way to the doors of our future !

Please, let me answer this one! Eighth graders Elani Dermatas and Natalie Martinez answer math questions. The Math Club enabled middle schoolers to show off their superior math skills outside of the normal classroom environment.

When one passes by St. Joseph's Hall, you walk by an important and significant division of Mount de Sales. The Middle School is not only part of the entire school, but it is also a school in itself. It has its own principal, Sr. Geraldyne, and its own guidance counselor, Mrs. Dadisman. The Middle School also participates in a variety of its own events and activities. The Math Club and Geography Bee allowed the students to compete amongst each other in academic competitions. A field trip to Historic Macon showed students the rich heritage of their city. Finally, Career Day gave students the chance to see what each others' parents did as well as learn what opportunities were available for their careers.

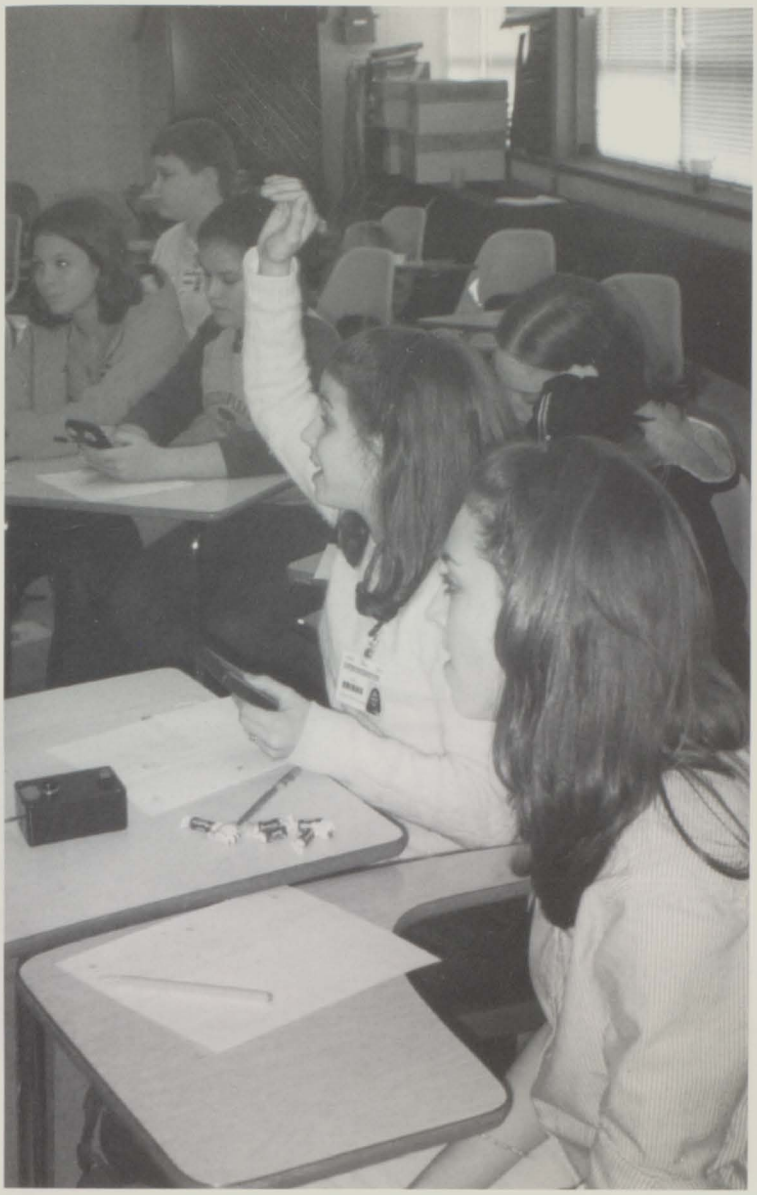

Future Architects... This lively group of eighth graders listens intently as their Hay House tour guide describes the history and architecture of the Hay House.This gave the students a chance to learn how such an impressive structure was built.

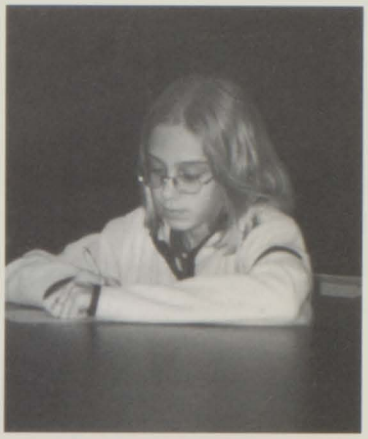

Follow the leader... Three middle school students venture out during their lunch break while on their field trip to historic downtown Macon. All the students enjoyed a breath of fresh air and a nice change of scenery.

What do you want to be when you grow up? Middle school students watch an interesting video for their annual Career Day. This special day allowed the students to ask questions about career fields that they were condsidering for their futures.

No one's getting my answers! Seventh grader Lindsey Sheppard carefully covers her work for the geography competition. The Geography Bee allowed students to display their knowledge of the world around them.

Finally, we meet... Eighth grader Ben Harrison takes the opportunity to hold the famous cannonball from the Cannonball House. The field trip gave the middle school students a chance to enjoy a relaxing day out of school.

Where in the world?... Eighth grader AJ Son and Mrs. Carlson discuss an interesting fact about geography. The Geography Bee was an activity of great excitement and fun for the seventh graders as well as the eighth graders.

What are those girls talking about? A group of eighth grade Math Club members gossips about the latest news with Mr. Garvin sitting close by. The Math Club was not only an educational club, but a social one as well.

Racking Their Brains

The Academic Bowl and Debate Team learn new ways of thinking.

Smile for the camera! Senior debate team member Jenny Paschke graciously accepts a plaque for her efforts in debating the negative position. This award was given to her by Mrs. Claire Swinford, the GISA Region Debate Coordinator.

This buzzer must not be working! Senior Academic Bowl team member Chad Folsom inspects the buzzer he will be using to make sure it is working properly. When preparing for competitions, it was necessary to check equipment.

Look what we can do! Debate team moderator Mrs. Tate proudly holds up the second place Region trophy won by the Debate Team at the Region meet. The trophy was a nice symbol of the accomplishments made by the entire team.

Let me think about it. Senior India Anderson ponders a problem given to her during a meeting of the Academic Bowl. Academic Bowl practices were a time to compete against teammates in order to strengthen the team as a whole.

It has been a long day! Senior Lanier Sammons and junior Joseph Irwin discuss the finer points of their argument while carrying all of their evidence. Evidence to back up arguments was an essential element of a successful debate.

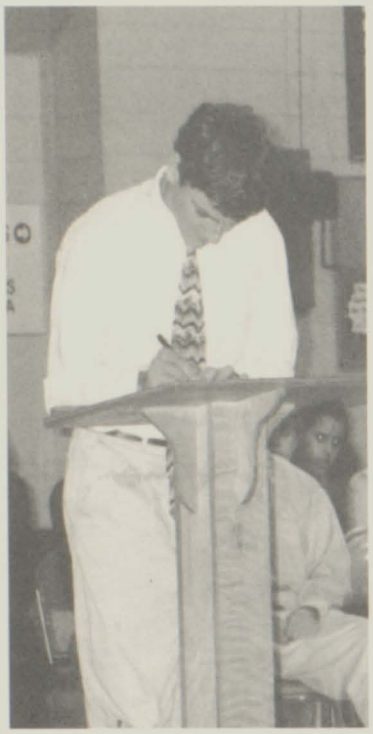

Listen and learn. Senior Carla Paschke delivers a speech in debate that clearly states the position she takes in her argument. Using good speech and precise statements was a part of the debate team's successful competitions.

Think...focus...learn. Junior James Taylor focuses on the question given to him during practice for the Academic Bowl. When given a difficult question, it was necessary to take a minute and think carefully to figure it out.

Honor In Achievement

The honor societies give recognition to excellence in students.

What happened? Juniors Erin Coleman, Kristin Taylor, and Lydia Sewell discuss the latest topics of the day at the reception following the National Honor Society Inductions. Enjoying time with friends after hard work was important to students.

What's my name again? Freshman Erik Hardison calmly stands at the podium and signs his name in the book containing the members of the National Junior Honor Society. Putting their names in this book marked a significant accomplishment for the students.

doorways to victories

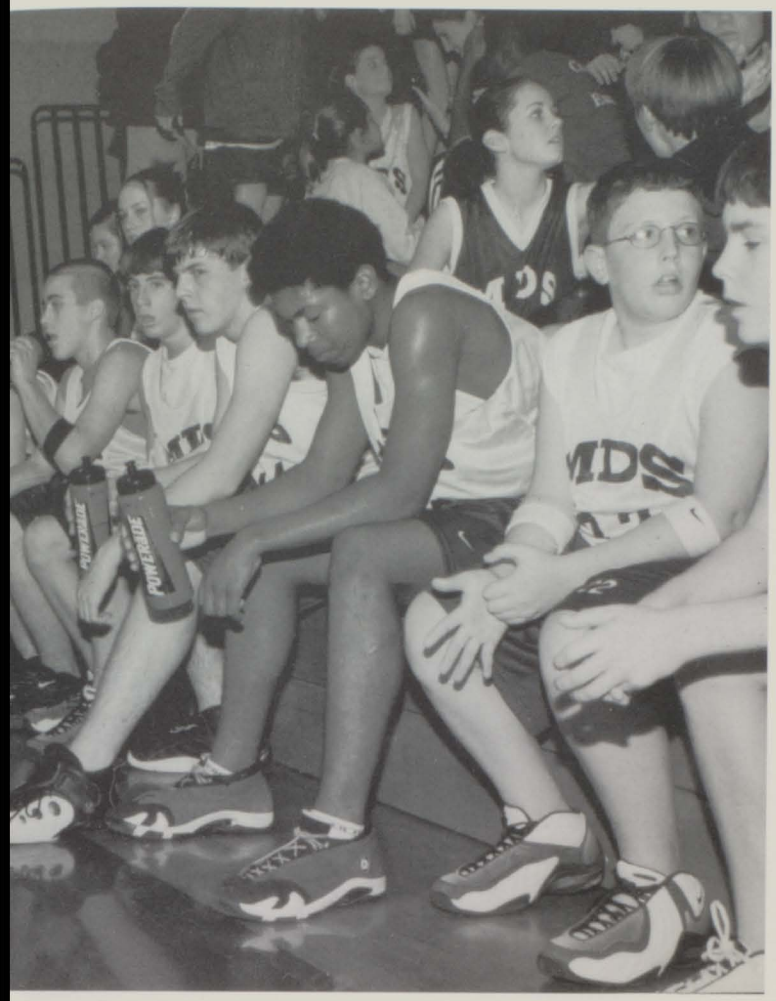

"Sports do not build character. They reveal it."
-John Wooden

The thrill of victory. The agony of defeat. The smell of fear. Emotions run high in the lives of athletes. More than just the emotions, however, is the infinite amount opportunities offered by sports. Never do so many doors appear to open and close as in athletics. With every pass of a basketball, every kick of a football, and every pitch of a baseball comes a window of opportunity. The course of the game lies in a single moment, in the chances a player takes, in the doors through which he walks, and in those that are closed before his foot can cross the threshold. Within seconds, athletes must make the decision to run for the doorways and head for the glorious destinations victory brings.

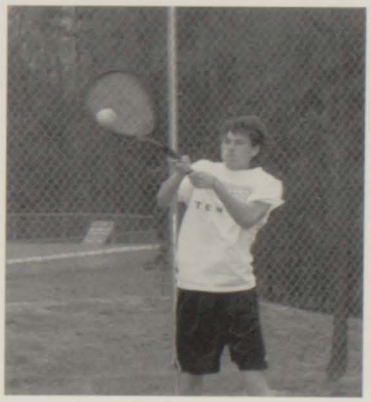

The wide variety of sports that MDS offers allows students to spread their wings and fly, going the distance to achieve their destined greatness.

All the right moves

For years, Cavalier football has been one of the school's most popular and heavily supported sports. In keeping with this proud tradition, this team displayed a great amount of talent, which was enhanced by their hard work. Everything from hot summer practices, agility exercises and gruelling hours of weightlifting with Coach Mack to student support at the games and pep rallies prepared the Cavs for their opponents. Not only did all 47 players put time and energy into football, but they also worked extremely hard to maintain their school work, balancing their role as athletes with their primary role as students. Led by eight seniors and head coach Robert Slocum, the team finished with a hard fought record of six wins and six losses, leaving the doors wide open for another terrific Cavalier season.

Heads or Tails? The seniors await the coin toss, hoping to get first dibs on the ball. The team will greatly miss the leadership that they provided over the years as Cavalier athletes.

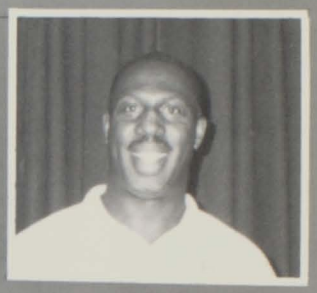

Running for the blue and gold! Junior Scott Hatcher avoids defensive tackles on his way to another long run for the Cavs. Scott helped lead the team with his remarkable running and passing skills.

"The team was a group of hard working young men. We lost five games to the "Final Four" teams in the G.I.S.A state playoffs."
- Head Coach
Robert Slocum

"I wasn't the biggest, the fastest or even the strongest, but I want to be remembered as the one who played with all of his heart out there on the field."
-Senior J.B. Trentadue

"I really had fun this year with the guys and will miss them next year."
-Senior Kelly Wall

You're not going anywhere! Junior Hamilton Hardison uses all his strength to stop the FPD running back. Hamilton's defensive skills were vital to the team's success.

Who let the Cavs out? The football team charges onto the field ready to meet the next opponent. The seniors led the team through the smoke as they headed for the sidelines.

"Soccer is great here at Mount de Sales Academy. I am glad we have the fields and the courts for the entire school's enjoyment" -Kenny Epps

Head to the goal... Sophomore Agon Kabashi astonishes the crowd as he heads another ball towards the opponent's goal. Referees and team members stood by in awe as it went in.

Get ready cause here they come... Eighth grader Mark Misinco gears up to score another one for the Blue and Gold. With players like him the school's soccer program thrived all season.

Heading for Greatness

Kicking down the doors

The boys varsity soccer team had a very memorable year. For the first time, the final four was held at Cavalier Fields, and the promise of a successful season, including a possible state championship run, was anticipated. The team had many things going for them, including eight returning seniors. The Cavs played in the FPD, Tatnall, and Smile'n Island tournaments, placing third in all of them. For the third year in a row, they took home the trophy as region champions. Going into the state tournament, the boys were ranked number one, but were not predicted to get past the fired up FPD Vikings. After defeating the Vikings with a score of 3-1, the Cavs looked towards the state game versus the Westminister Wildcats. The team played a well fought game, but came up short of state championship glory. All and all, the season was a great one and helped restore de Sales' soccer legacy.

"Even though I was hurt, I still had a great and exciting season."
- Senior Lanier Sammons

"We had a great season, our team came together and played hard."
- Senior Nick Miklowski

"Soccer isn't a matter of life and death, it's more important than that."
- Senior Eden Taylor

Stand back everyone,* I'm going to score. Junior Jonathan Koetter parts a sea of defense as he dribbles down the field. Good footwork is key to a strong and successful season.

One more touch and... Senior Dan Castresana takes one final touch in preparing for a shot. Dan's speed combined with his deadly shot effectively shut down the competition.

This one's not getting past me! Senior Spencer Stull dives for a hard hit shot during a game. The job of the goal keeper is to remain calm and cool during very stressful situations.

I believe I can fly! Senior Nick Mclendon shows his jumping ability as he goes for a header. Nick worked extremely hard on his speed in the off season, so he could run faster than any defender.

I'll put this ball on a dime. Junior Chris Putnam steps back and with deep concentration, delivers a great cross. Chris spent his summer in Europe to prepare for this season.

Get off of me! Sophomore Noel Murray dribbles cautiously as he gets ready to pass to one of his teammates. Patience is a very important asset to possess during a close game.

The game isn't over yet. The team listens as Coach Dattilo reviews some of the plays. Speeches were delivered before and after each game, helping to identify the players' mistakes.

Swinging Into Victory

The Varsity Girls Softball team played a well fought season. Coach Chester Pierce knew this team would live up to expectations. They finished the season with a record of 16 wins and 13 losses. The girls experienced many ups and downs, but all in all, the girls showed great intensity in every game. The girls made it to the state tournament and fell just shy of qualifying for the final four, placing second in the region. The girls learned great teamwork and dedication. The team, consisting of two freshmen, eight sophomores, five juniors, and one senior will lose only one player next year, allowing them to build on everything they have learned. Hard work, motivation, and the girls' love of the game really made the season a great success.

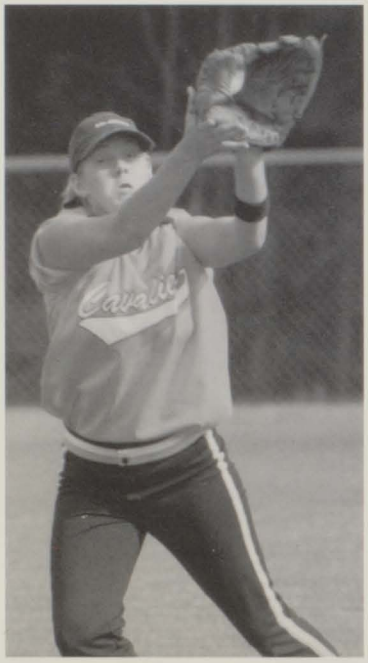

What a sweet swing! Junior Jennifer Leverett extends with perfect form as she makes a solid connection for the Cavs. She made this look so easy.

This one is going over the fence! Senior Keri Beth Tidmore waits to send the next pitch into the parking lot. She worked very hard in the off season.

I got it! Sophomore Brittany Hartley catches a line drive to end the inning. Brittany displayed great fielding technique.

Watch this ball fly! Sophomore Emily Pittard swings with power at this one. Emily had a great offensive and defensive season.

Alright girls, we've got to step it up! Coach Pierce motivates the Cavs as they go into the last inning. The Lady Cavs had many close games this year.

She's just too fast! Freshman Lindsey Williams slides into home to score another run for the team. Good base running was the key to winning games.

Run Kara Run! Freshman Kara Williams trots down the first base line trying to beat the throw. Those sprints during the off-season increased the girls speed.

Next batter up

Youth and teamwork proved to be a tough combination to beat for the Junior Varsity softball team's opponents. The girls exhibited strong teamwork and played to the best of their abilities, earning them a second place finish at the Stratford B-team tournament. Seventh grader Katie Beall attributes the success of the season to the fact that, "We concentrated on the game and helped each other." The coaches, Nichole Dixon and Katie Crosby, believe that all the members of the team have a great deal of potential in the future as Varsity softball players.

Watch out! Seventh grade shortstop Kalie Matthews prepares to throw a great pitch to help her team win the game. Her strong arm was an asset for the team.

Heads up! Eighth grader Betsy Poe watches anxiously to see whether her ball will be called foul or fair. The fans await patiently for the results, ready to cheer wildly at any given moment.

Will it get there in time? Sophomore Rachel Azar throws the ball in from her third base position as quickly as possible. Due to their strong teamwork, the girls had much success.

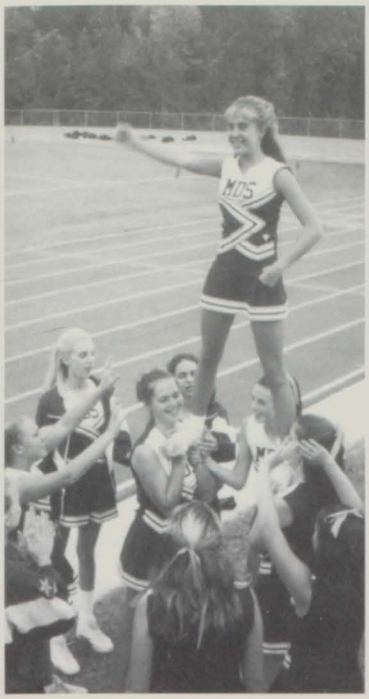

Look out! Seventh grader Jenna Murphy concentrates on the ball and prepares for a strong swing. Focusing on the game and playing to the best of their ability gave the team a good season.

Cheering for victory

Steady now, don't drop her! Candice Dupree is hoisted in the air by the rest of the B-team cheerleading squad, as she is the flyer on the elevator stunt. These girls are great inspirations for school spirit.

"Even though it's hard work, cheerleading is worth the effort when you lead school spirit."
Amanda Perofsky, C-team Cheerleader

Go Cavs! Seventh grader Katie Massey cheers as the C-team football team scores another touchdown for the blue and gold. Support by the girls added to this game's excitement.

All for the Cavaliers, stand up and holler! Eighth grade C-team cheerleader Christine Lopapa helps lead the football players to win their game as she yells enthusiastically.

Got Spirit?

Varsity cheerleading, what a job! If students are under the impression that cheerleaders just show up at the game with their pom-poms and megaphones and look peppy as they attempt to lead the team to victory, then students need to know what actually takes place behind the scenes. Varsity cheerleading is the only sport which passes through three athletic seasons. Cheerleaders practice most days that there is not a game, beginning with many hours during the summer, and they paint banners and locker signs for the players on game days. They practice stunts and cheers until perfect for the game. Everything may look all smiley and peppy, but in actuality, things are a great deal harder than they seem. These girls and guys know exactly what hard work is and how to get things done while doing them well. Cheerleading is a fun sport, which takes major commitment and a great deal of time to dedicate to practices, games, and other behind the scenes activities which take place in order to lead the entire school in support of their teams.

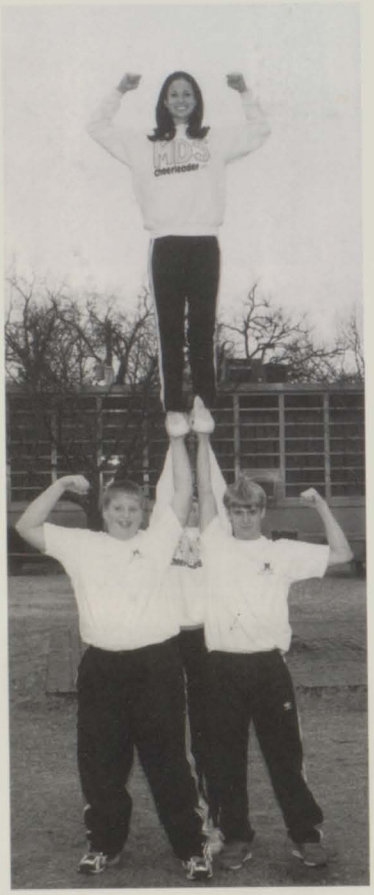

Bust a move! The cheerleaders perform a dance at the pep rally. The dance, performed to "Bling, Bling," was enjoyed by all and lifted school spirit for the upcoming game that night.

Look at him go! Sophomore Sara Suchower watches in amazement as the football team attempts to score. Close games like this one always captured the attention of the fans and cheerleaders alike.

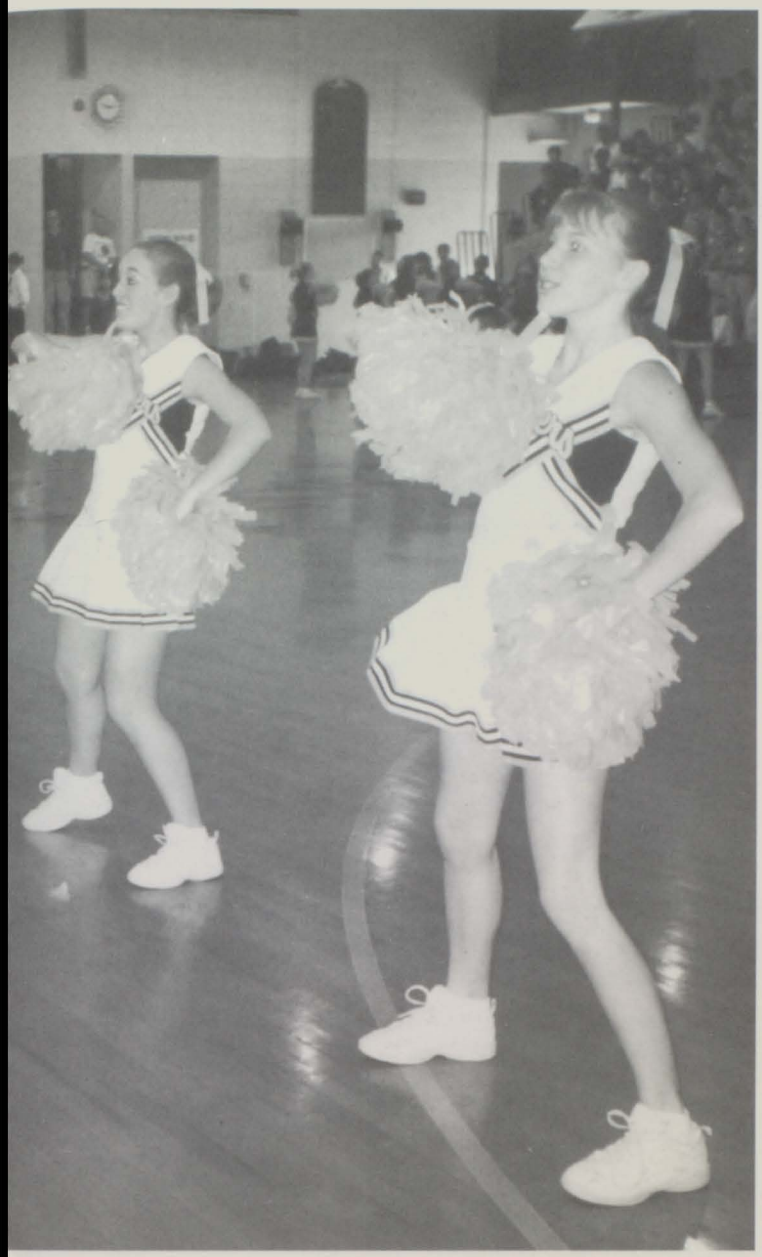

We're awesome, so hot! Sophomores Geoff Walker and Kyle Schuchmann prove their strength by holding junior Skyler Stull up with one hand. A great deal of practice went into performing stunts, especially the one-handed kind!

Get fired up! Senior Carla Paschke demonstrates school spirit at the annual homecoming bonfire. The cheerleaders have always played a vital role in boosting school spirit during homecoming week.

"V," for victory! Senior Elizabeth M son cheers on the team as they win a exciting game. This cheer has been f vored by the fans to celebrate a har earned victory after a close, intense gam

Go big blue! The cheerleaders get the school excited about the upcoming game at the pep rally. Pep rallies have been proven to promote school spirit and victories for the team.

Paint by numbers... The cheerleaders take time to decorate the school by painting banners. Banners were used to inform students about the games so they could come out to support the team.

Hit your motion! The cheerleaders practice a stunt for the upcoming game. Nailing the stunts in practice was essential so that no one was injured during a game or pep rally.

Take it to the hoop! The cheerleaders celebrate another basket made as they cheer the team on to victory. Fan participation was essential in close games and helped promote team support.

Running For Success

Anyone got some water? Junior Nic Dermatas runs frantically for the finis line where he can get a refreshing cup o water. Running in a race makes anybod crave some replenishing H_2O.

Okay girls...say cheese! The girls, with silver trophy in hand, smile victoriously for the camera. The girls' cross country team had a well deserved finish as region runner-ups.

Not even breakin' a sweat! Eighth grader Alison Lizek runs to a photo finish in a local meet. Alison always gave a solid effort every time she ran in a race.

On your mark... get set... go! As the starting shot is fired into the air, the Cavaliers explode to a mighty lead. The Cavs kept the momentum at high throttle to finish strong in the race.

Running strong! Members of the girls cross country team lead the pack at the start of a meet. The lady Cavs always got off to a good start.

Let's Get Ready To Rumble

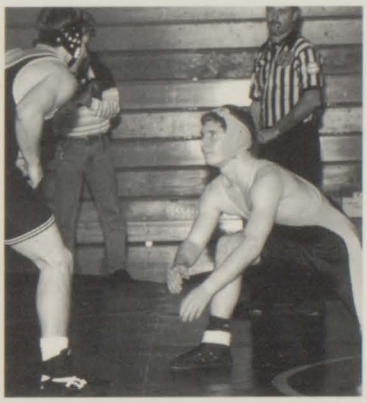

If I execute this just right...Senior David Rumph shows this competitor who has really got whom, as he performs a move called the cow-catcher. Even with a high fever at state, he still took second place.

Just try to get out of this one. Freshman Andrew Martens holds down his opponent, in hopes of getting a pin. Though this was his first year, Andrew was a dominant force on the team.

C'mon make the first move... Sophomore Josh Adams taunts the opposing competitor by feigning forward deceptively. This was a common practice used to catch the opposing contender off guard, leaving him open for an attack.

If I can just hold out a little longer...Freshman Clinton Johnson forces his opponent to the ground and puts him down for a pin. Weight was not always an advantage. Often times quickness and agility proved to be better.

Takin' it to the House

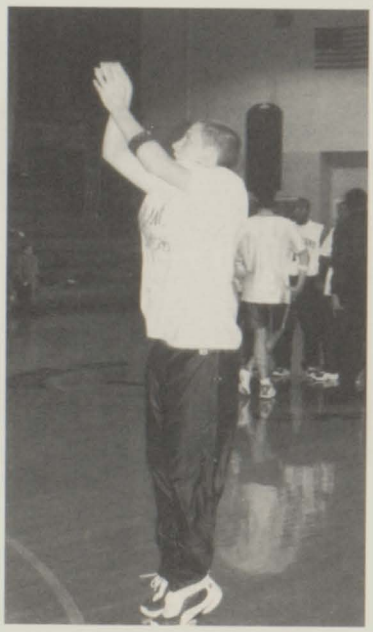

The 2000-2001 basketball season proved to be one of the best years for Mount de Sales basketball, with both varsity teams advancing to the Final Four. The boys season was one filled with many heart stopping victories which led to their nickname the "Cardiac Cavaliers" given to them by the Macon Telegraph. Led by Mount de Sales newcomers Travis Dotterer and Jim Massey, the Cavaliers boasted a hard-fought 17-11 record. In the middle of the season, the Cavaliers defeated rival Tattnall by thirty points to claim the Tattnall Holiday Tournament Championship. In region play, the Cavs placed third and had one player make the All-Tournament team. Other team honors included: three players making All-Region, two All-Star players, and one player being named to the All-State team. The season was later capped off by two victories over Sherwood and Westminster to advance to the state Final Four, ending in a close loss to Central Fellowship Christian Academy. The season, however, was the beginning of a new basketball program. Even though the boys came up short on their state championship goal, the season was still a memorable one with many exciting events.

Okay, this is it! The starters get ready to be announced before a home game. Every player on the team got outstanding support from the fans, whether they played the whole game or not.

Diaper Dandies

I got the rock! Seventh grader Patrick Slonaker fights fiercely to retrieve the ball from his opposition. Patrick's fighting effort gave the Cavaliers possession of the ball late in the game.

Poster perfect. Eighth grader Luke Mummert gracefully soars by an opposing offender to free himself for the shot. Luke's acrobatic move enabled him to actually make the difficult lay-up.

I gotcha this time! Sophomore Carl Puckett struggles with his opposition for possession of the ball. Carl's hard work ethic earned him a spot later in the season on the varsity team.

Shooting for the Big Time

She's unbelievable! Eighth grader Gina Tamboli drives hard for an open lay-up against a Tattnall player. Gina's athletic ability helped her to score this basket as well as many others.

This ball is all mine! Sophomore Rachel Azar gets in to great position for a rebound. Stratford girls tried their best to stop her, but they were unable to defeat the Cavs this time.

C'mon! Jump for that rebound! Ninth grader Megan Slonaker shoots a free throw during the game as one of her teammates battles hard for a rebound. The girls fought hard the whole game.

Slammin' the Door Down

As the 2001 season began, the Lady Cavaliers were ranked first in state. With these high expectations, the Lady Cavaliers rose to the challenge with the support of the students and fans. Their season was off to a great start. They won the Tattnall Christmas Tournament and scored a school record high of ninety-nine points in the game against Tiftarea. As the season continued, these girls gave it their best, with all their practice, skill, and efforts being reflected on the court. As the season drew to an end, the Lady Cavaliers knew they had a chance to make it to state. During the region play-offs, these girls dominated. In the end, they lost an intense game to Stratford, putting them second in region. Continuing on to state play-offs, the Lady Cavaliers beat the number one ranked team in the state, Brentwood Academy, taking them to Georgia College for the final four games. The Lady Cavaliers triumphed over FPD. The state game against Stratford was a very close, exciting game. Losing by only four points, the Lady Cavaliers came in as state-runners up. What an excellent way to end the season!

We love our Cavaliers, deep down in our hearts! The team cheers on the players on the court during a very intense game. Team and fan support were vital throughout the season.

"S," score, score! Junior Audra Orange attempts a lay-up to pull the team to victory. Skills such as this made the team victorious, outstanding, and difficult to beat.

What don't you understand? Coach Hatcher signals the players on the court and tells them what to do. Good coaching and leadership allowed the team to do their best.

Offense! Senior Kelly Wall waits for an opening so she can pass the ball to another team mate. Good defense and offense prevented the other team from scoring and kept the Cavaliers ahead.

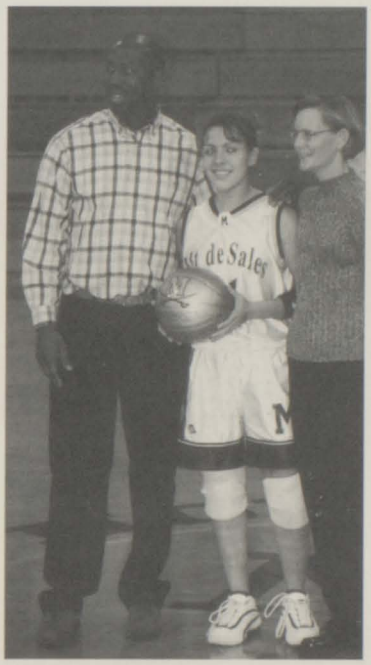

Get tough, attack! Coach Hatcher drills the players about their newest strategy. Huddles at time-outs allowed the team to review plays for the game as they caught their breath while sitting down.

Golden girl! Senior Jessie Rosa holds a basketball in honor of her thousandth point scored. Most players have found records such as this nearly impossible to break in a single high school basketball career.

Ready to run! The Cavaliers run out of the locker room as they prepare to warm up prior to the game that night. Pre-game spirit psyched the team up for the important match up at Georgia College.

Take it to the hoop! Junior Jennifer Leverett and sophomore Frances Layfield work together to steal the ball from the opposing team. Team work made them victorious over their opponents.

Watch that ball go, rebound! Junior Christina Price watches the ball come down as she attempts to rebound it. Numerous rebounds have allowed the team to take control of the ball and the game.

Running for Glory

The 2001 varsity track team had a stupendous season. MDS newcomer, Coach Jim Massey, took on the role of leading the teams to victory. Joining him were many new athletes who offered fine contributions of time and talents as well as track veterans whose experience was invaluable. Coaches began recruiting students early in the year. As as a result, many team members not only enjoyed the opportunity for spring competition, but also welcomed the chance to cross-train for other sports as well. These boys and girls worked extremely hard, some beginning as early as February to prepare themselves for their opponents. Many members of the team advanced to region and fourteen students, including four seniors, even qualified for the state meet in Albany. With a work ethic like that, MDS track will definitely continue to improve and challenge its competitors in the future.

Just one more...left! Junior Lee Matthews' facial expression shows that he is ready to complete this leap. Lee's height and long legs gave him a distinct advantage in the hurdles.

You better hurry! Sophomore Jessica Robinson takes off in order to pass the baton to her teammate. Although small in stature, she packed quite a bit of speed on the track.

Run Nigel, run! Freshman Nigel Esser runs as fast as he can to hand off the baton to the next runner. Every runner had to do well in order to give his partner a good starting position.

Playin' in the sand! Junior Katie Leverett shows off her leaping ability as she sails over the line into the dirt. Her basketball skills helped even after the season on the court was over.

Olympic style! Senior Patrick Cassidy exhibits perfect form for jumping hurdles. Patrick's competitiveness and determination gave him an edge over many other athletes.

Flying high! Sophomore Rachel Azar soars gracefully over the high jump bar, making the event look easy. Rachel made the high jump one of her specialties in track and field.

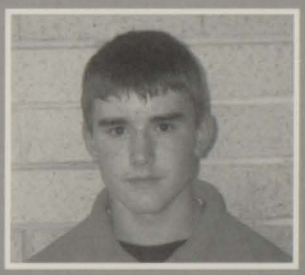

Running with ease. Sophomore Nneka Nwosu sprints ahead of the other runners in one of the relay races. Hard work paid off in a successful season for the girl's relay team.

Making A Splash

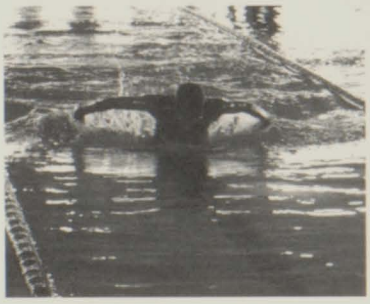

The 2000-2001 swim team had a season that was both exciting and challenging, ending with a State Championship title for both the girls' and boys' teams. A few obstacles were met before the title was won, such as inexperience and lack of stamina. Swimmers, therefore, had to commit longer hours of training as a result of these obstacles. Training and endurance building were the main goals of the coaches who hoped to achieve a successful season. A combination of enthusiasm, energy, and high scorers added up to give the team an outstanding season. The girls enjoyed bringing home the State Championship trophy for the second year in a row, while the boys team celebrated their third state victory. With these wins, the team greatly improved its record to four out of a possible five state wins.

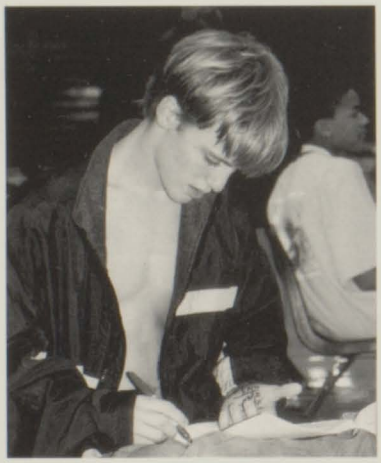

Ready, set, dive! Two swimmers take off and begin the race to the finish line. Teammates learned that starting each race with confidence was important to the outcome of the event.

Swim like a butterfly, sting like a bee... Sophomore Solomon Sewell focuses on swimming steadily to the finish line. Focus and good form were essential assets that the team possessed.

Wait...what do these numbers mean? Sophomore Kyle Schuchmann writes down the events in which he will be participating. Swimmers wrote their schedules in grease pencils on their hands to remember their events.

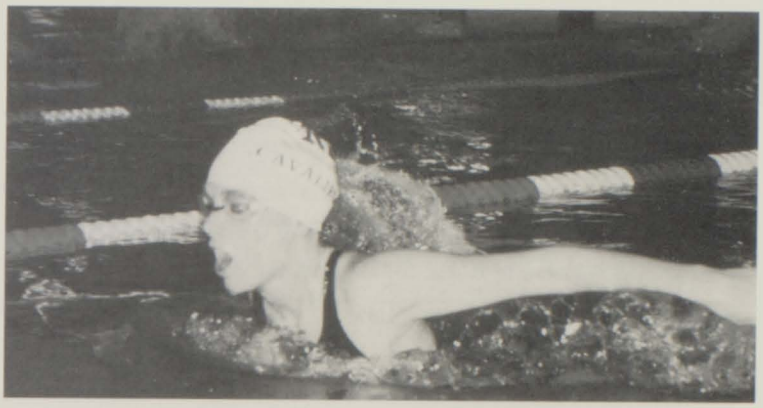

Swimmers...take your mark! Seventh grader Maria Patterson takes the block and gets ready for the race to begin. Starting out in good form often helped the team to begin with a powerful lead.

Cavalier spirit... Eighth graders Mary Montgomery and Kathryn Young write spirited messages on their arms and backs. Supportive team members were a big factor in the fantastic season.

Remember to breathe! Sophomore Haley Huckabee comes up for a breath as she concentrates on her back stroke. Breathing techniques were essential to the team's performance.

Concentrate...you're doing great! Junior Sarah Harmon gives herself a pep talk as her butterfly stroke propels her to the finish line. When the race was long, it was important to stay positive.

Listen up! Coach Stockslager and Coach Dadisman share some words of wisdom with the team. Good leadership and experience are what kept the team strong and focused.

"Being the Varsity Girls' Team captain was a great experience, even if I set a bad example by coming late to every practice."
Jayme Potts
Senior

"I think the most memorable part was while we were waiting for the winners to be called, and then we realized, oh my gosh, we won [the State Championships]."
Maria Patterson
Seventh Grade

"Swimming is a great combination of individual and team sport. We all learned a lot about setting and making goals, and working together."
Cole Ryles
Freshman

Diamonds in the Rough

The 2001 varsity baseball team was a young but talented squad that improved as the season wore on. They lost four seniors from the previous year's team and had three freshmen starters. The biggest obstacle for the team was trying to find consistent pitchers, since three pitchers graduated the previous year. Overall, the team had seven new members join the varsity squad. They seemed to gain an outstanding amount of insight, however, under the leadership of first year head coach Marc Lipson. The team played better than their record indicated. They qualified for state, but were knocked out in the first round of the playoffs by Southland Academy. The players will greatly miss the three seniors who have dedicated a tremendous amount of time and hard work to the baseball program. The team has a strong nucleus of young talent, however, along with some veteran players who should make them a force with which to be reckoned in the future.

Defense wins the game! Junior Jonathan Koetter fields the ball to throw out the base runner. Jonathan clearly proved that defense is an important aspect of baseball.

Safe! Sophomore Billy Schwab slides into second base, chalking up another steal. The ability to get a runner in scoring position helped the team tremendously.

Step and throw. Senior John Paul Shelby fields the ball cleanly as he throws the baseball to first base. Fielding came naturally to pitchers because they practiced it daily.

You're in next inning! Coach Marc Lipson gets the attention of one of his players during the game. Every player listened attentively to the coaches when they gave instructions.

Another golden glove catch! Junior Cole Miller soars through the air and makes a thrilling catch to keep a runner from scoring. Every player has dreamed of making a dynamic catch in a clutch situation.

He's out! Freshman Andrew Durr extends to catch a hot grounder after covering second base on a steal. Andrew worked very hard and earned himself a spot on the varsity roster.

I hope he gets a hit! Sophomore Rocky Rogers watches the game intensely from inside the dugout. Rocky took advantage of the opportunity to learn from the more experienced players on the field.

"It wasn't over 'til the game ended. Play hard or go home."

"Things didn't go as well as we had wanted, but I think we learned a lot as the season went on."
-Junior Nick Dermatas

"It was a lot of fun being a baseball manager this year. I will miss the team tremendously next year."
-Senior Margo Gentry

Reaching the Goal

Get your kicks in! Eighth grader Stephanie Nelson makes a swift kick to put the ball in the goal. Great offensive players helped the team dominate against their opponents.

Catch me if you can! Eighth grader Jennifer Lidstone runs forward with the ball in hopes of evading the opposing player. Quick plays and fast movements disarmed the other team.

What's the plan? Seventh grader Megan Garver discusses the game strategy with her fellow teammate. By knowing what tactics they would use against their opponent, the team could work together for a victory.

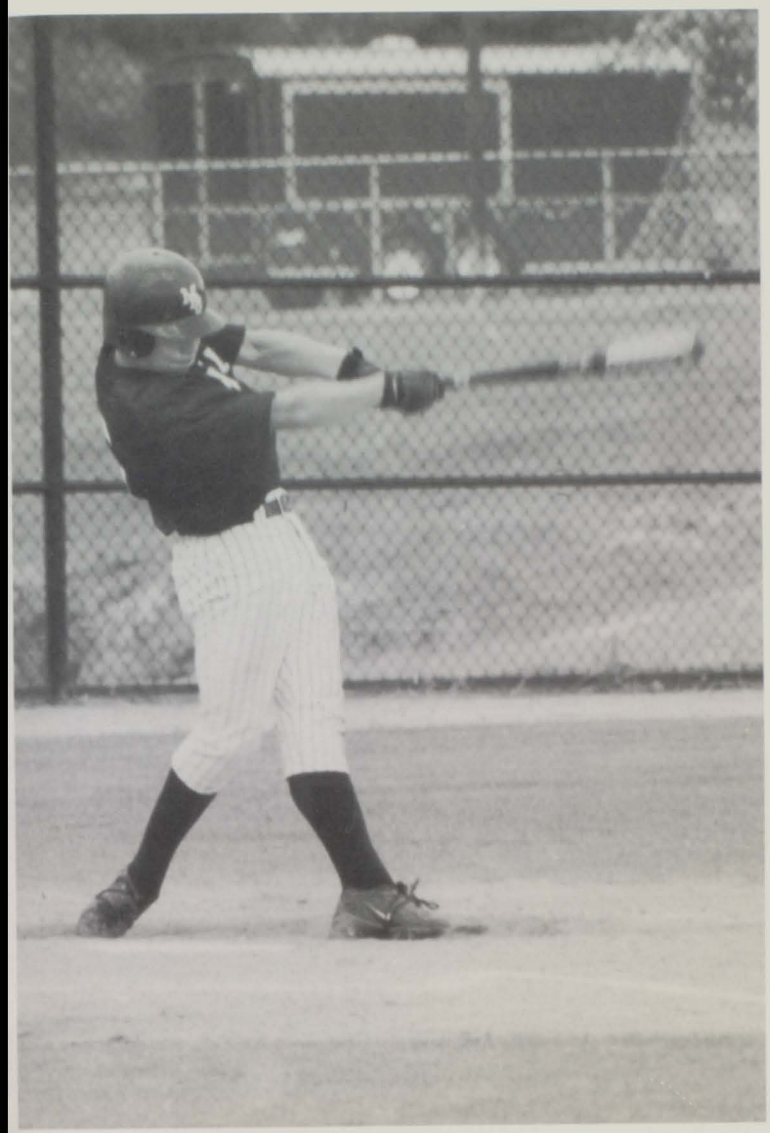

Stomp and kick! Seventh grader Katherine Snow charges the ball and uses her knees to move it in the right direction. Moves like these astounded the opposing team and helped the offense.

In the Swing of Things

It's out of here! Eighth grader Brandon Mahoney strikes a ball, aiming for the fence. The team spent many hours in hitting practice preparing for moments such as this one.

He's safe! Eighth grader Luke Mummert slides safely into base. Sliding has been an essential offensive tool to prevent outs and score runs.

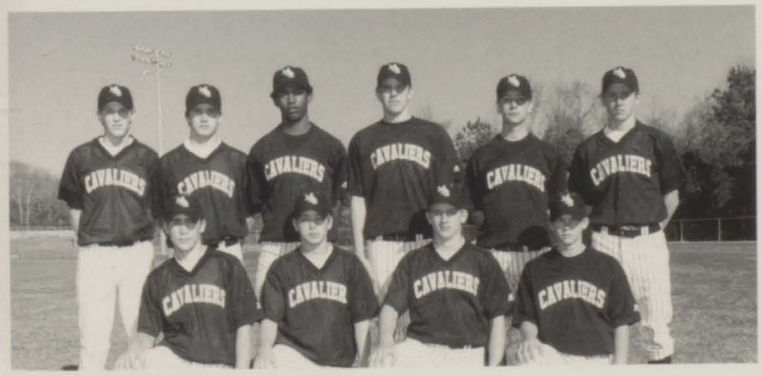

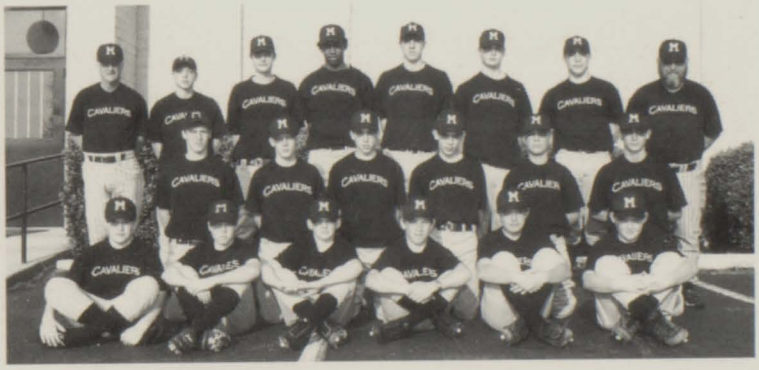

Whoa now! Freshman Andrew Dockrell waits patiently for the outfield to return the ball. Good teamwork and cooperation between the infield and outfield helped throw many competitors out.

Get down ball! Eighth grader Nahshon Bigham throws the ball and attempts to get a runner out. Strong arms and accurate throws made the team great defensively.

"Aay!"...Soccer!

The Varsity Girls Soccer team had another exciting season. The year was filled with both trials and triumphs. The girls began the season with the skeptical eye of the region upon them. Their opponents knew that the Cavs had lost several seniors and incorrectly considered them to be a second-rate team. The girls pulled together, however, to show everyone how wrong their assumptions had been. Led by the experience of Coach Tam Smith and a small group of only four seniors, the team produced one of the best years ever. The high point of the season came when the girls defeated Stratford in a shoot-out to end that school's six year winning streak. Just as he had promised the team, Coach Smith shaved his beard to celebrate the historic victory. The year ended with the girls dominating the playoffs and advancing to the final four. After defeating Heritage Academy in the semifinals, they lost a hard fought 2-0 battle against Stratford in the final game.

X marks the spot... Coach Tam Smith reviews a play before the team goes out on the field. Sophomore Nneka Nwosu gladly assisted while he explained the game plan.

High five, down low, too slow! Freshman Lindsey Williams gets down for a very low high five from sophomore Frances Layfield. She was the only starter from her class, foreshadowing her leadership potential in the future.

Just kicking around. As junior Jessica Freeman plans her next move, she dribbles the ball until she finds an open player. This strategy confused the opponents as to what the Cavaliers had in store.

Get out of my way! Sophomore Frances Layfield pushes her way across the field to set up an important play. Her endurance payed off in every game in which she appeared.

Move it or lose it! Senior captain Jessie Rosa stays in control of the ball as she leads it towards the net to score a goal. Other Cavaliers look on as she helps lead the team to victory.

Good luck everyone! Junior Kirby Williams runs by her teammates to get the adrenaline going. Displays of team spirit such as this helped get the girls fired up before the upcoming game.

Keep your eye on the ball! Sophomore Lauren Patch concentrates on her mission to maintain possession of the ball. With her efforts, she was able to help beat the opposing team.

Putting Away the Competition

This way please...Sophomore Set Story removes the flag from the hole allowing the ball to enter. Many time the golfers helped their teammate out by removing each other's flags

I think I got this one! Sophomore Seth Story putts for a birdie to go one under for the day. Seth was a vital part of the team, making the first hole in one for the team since 1985.

Fore! Junior Brandt Orr tees off, exhibiting perfect form. Brandt showed confidence and skill whenever he played, always leaving the green with a smile on his face.

Get down ball...Sophomore Drew Edwards shows off his short game with this chip shot. Many times it was not the long game but the short game which involved the most concentration.

Now bend a little to the right. Junior John Cacavias stares after he hits a shot on target for the hole. John used his experience to help lead the young golf team.

Get out of my house...Freshman Melvin Smith smashes the ball over the net from the incoming serve. Along with endurance and stamina, agility was a large part of playing the game.

That's definitely a point... Sophomore Jenna Schmitt unleashes a powerful backhand shot to put the score to 15-love. Jenna liked to train so that when match time came she would perform well.

Must get to it...Junior Jason Glow sprints to hit the ball before it touches the ground. Jason helped lead the boy's team to a second place finish in the state competition.

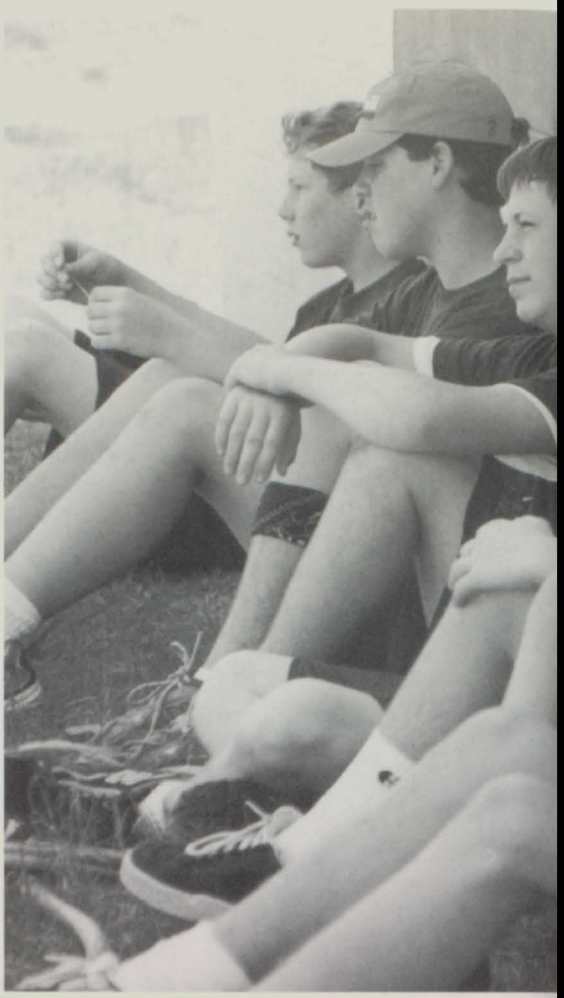

Must focus on the ball...Junior Shelby Smith hones in on the ball, keeping her balance at the same time. Shelby worked hard over the season to improve her individual skills.

Rackets Held High

destined for greatness

"The only way to have a friend is to be one."
-Ralph Waldo Emerson

The ties that bind classmates to one another are what makes high school great. While faculty members and the knowledge and wisdom they bring to us may first open the doors to our futures, our friends are the ones who hold the doors, who encourage us to walk through, who give us the strength and support we need to make the decisions regarding the rest of our lives. The people that we pass everyday in the halls or that we see at our lockers are the ones that travel with us through high school's journey, the ones who are with us when we reach our destinations. Without the help of our classmates, the doors of our lives would slam shut and our destinations would be unreachable.

The friendships that students form keep them journeying on, surviving all of school's challenges with positive outlooks on life.

walking a new Path

You are getting very sleepy. Eighth grader Luke Mummert tries to stay attentive, but is overtaken by sleepiness. Students often tried to sneak a cat nap during classes, but their actions hardly ever went unnoticed by the teachers.

He got game. Eighth grader Jarrett Cooper practices his dribbling skills during gym class. Basketball was one of many activities offered to nourish the students' physical development by building endurance, among other skills.

It's electric! These soulful middle school girls flaunt their dancing skills at the first middle school social of the year by doing the electric slide. Socials were a great time to dance, laugh, and have an infinite amount of fun with friends.

Students, this is due before the end of class. Eighth graders Christine Lopapa and Nicole Moore dutifully work to finish an assignment before the bell rings. Throughout the year, teachers constantly reminded the students to use their time wisely.

Lost in thought... Seventh grader Patrick Slonaker daydreams about something very appealing as his fellow classmates volunteer to answer a seemingly easy question. Active participation during class discussions was requested of the students by all teachers.

SCHOOLER

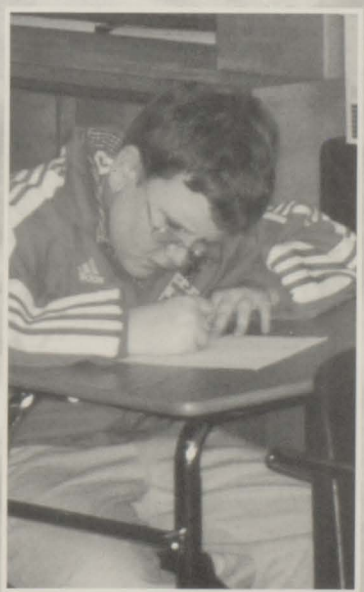

Do I have any homework? Eighth grader Jessica Wyche stops at her locker to retrieve the books she will need for this night's homework. She enjoyed the luxury of a top locker which was a privilege granted only to eighth graders in the middle school.

Leaders of the pack. This group of seventh graders strides down St. Joseph's Hall as they switch classes during the four minutes given to do so. They had just enough time to chat with each other while they hurried off to their next destinations.

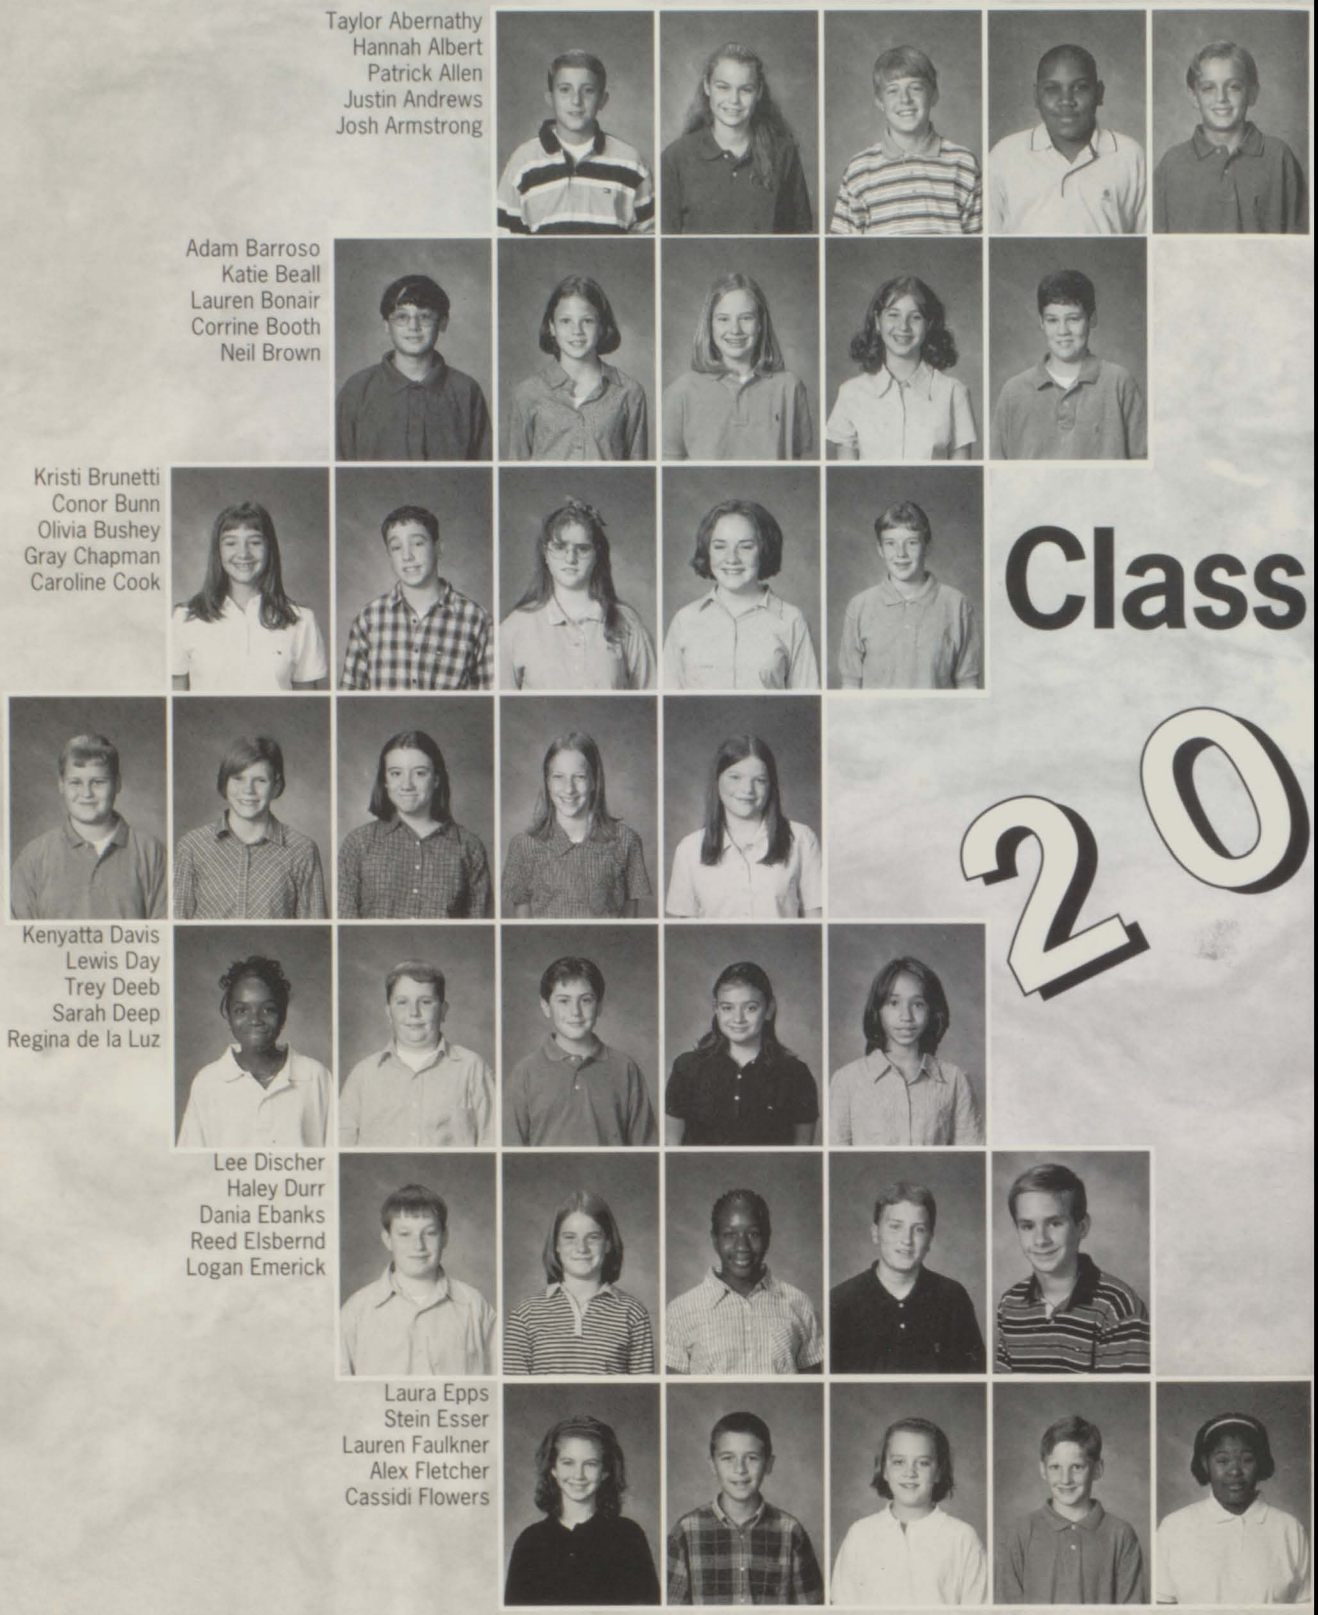

Solve the following equations. Eighth grader Kathryn Young seeks help from her calculator to answer a difficult question during math class. Such devices proved to be beneficial to most students during such times of need.

Five minutes left, class. Seventh grader Randy Treiber hurriedly tries to complete a test before time runs out. At such moments, the phrase, "There are not enough hours in the day," seemed to be especially true.

Ladies' choice. The belles of this middle school social elegantly slow dance with their beaus. Love and friendship were definitely in the air when classes had the opportunity to come together at such events.

entry into the Future

Let me try! Lee Discher and Mary Katherine Stewart examine a project with interest as they are partnered together. Hard work was emphasized by the faculty, but the importance of fun was not overlooked.

Everybody make some noise! These excited seventh graders enthusiastically show their Cavalier spirit at the Homecoming pep rally. Though this was their very first Homecoming pep rally, they seemed to know exactly what to do.

Ready, Set, Sing! These talented seventh grade chorus members take a break from entertaining the student body with their majestic renditions of Christmas carols. The annual Christmas program heralded the arrival of the Christmas season to the school.

Smile and the whole world smiles with you. Katie Crumbley and Kayla Watson uncontrollably giggle during lunch as they share the humor of a joke. They enjoyed one of the few opportunities given to eat lunch outside.

Lend a helping hand. Adrienne Garofalo willingly helps fellow classmate Caroline Cook as they work together during class using a newly purchased I-book computer. Technology was a major aspect of each student's academic life.

Tug of War. Scott Golub referees as fellow classmates Tommy Dunn and Taylor Maddox battle it out over a gym bag. Such vigor and energy made the social scene even merrier and more enjoyable for all.

memories locked Away

Finally, a break! This group of boys sits in the Middle School hall as they talk and enjoy each other's company. Even though they took a break from the worries of the day, they knew there was still much work to be accomplished.

Concentration is the key. Dauphin Childs, Alison Lizek, and Vivi Brown are processing their thoughts as they take a difficult test. During such times, anxiety was not an uncommon feeling. At these moments, studying seemed to have been a good idea.

Once upon a time... In an animated tone, Chelsea Bunn reads a book to an attentive preschooler as part of Retreat Day. This was one of many activities offered to show the students the needs and opportunities for service in the community.

How has your day been? With a solemn expression, Ryan Glisson sits outside of Mrs. Dadisman's office as he, like most students, waits for the day to end. The student body was led through the year by an understanding and patient faculty.

as we walk Together

So when did this happen? Seventh graders Kurt Hardison, Neil Brown, and Conor Bunn share an informative moment during the middle school lunch period. After a good meal, students often talked with each other about out of school activities.

Friends that study together stay together. Sophomores Randi Warren and Rebekah Stiff help each other gain a little more knowledge by working together. It benefited them both in making a better grade in their classes.

Hmmm,sounds good to me. Senior Florence Bivins uses her four years of high school experience to help freshman Sondra Calhoun with her schedule changes. It was a nice gesture that made Sondra feel welcomed.

Oh behave! The Sophomore Class perfomed a stunning rendition of "Austin Powers" during the homecoming skit night. All the classes performed their skits well that night, but Austin Powers really brought in the laughs.

Hey Mr. DJ! Junior L'Neisha Leslie and freshman Bethany Dadisman bust a move at the homecoming dance in the gym. Most students who attended the dance knew the electric slide or the bus stop.

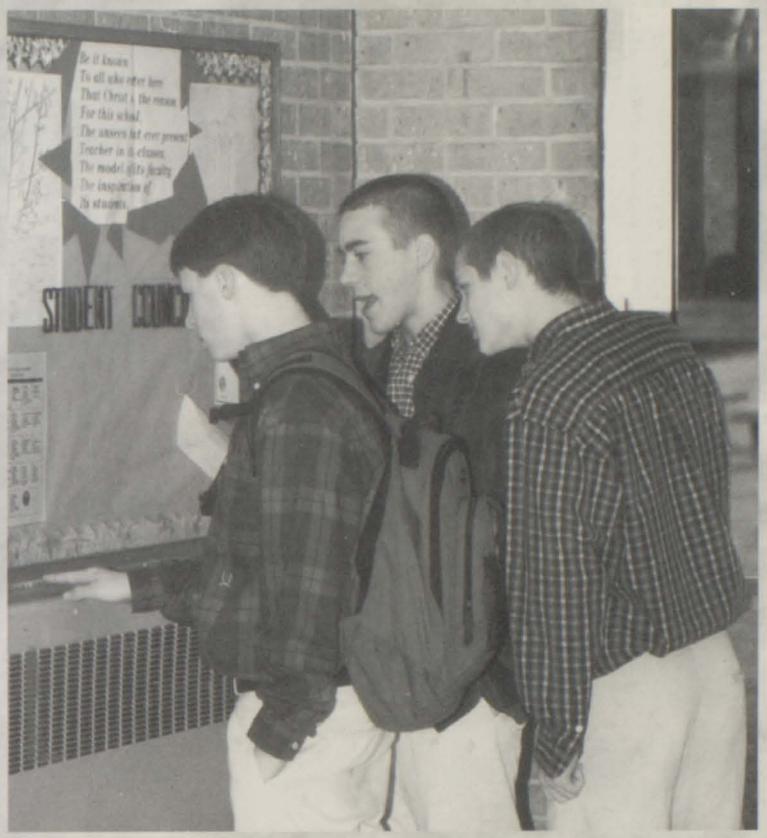

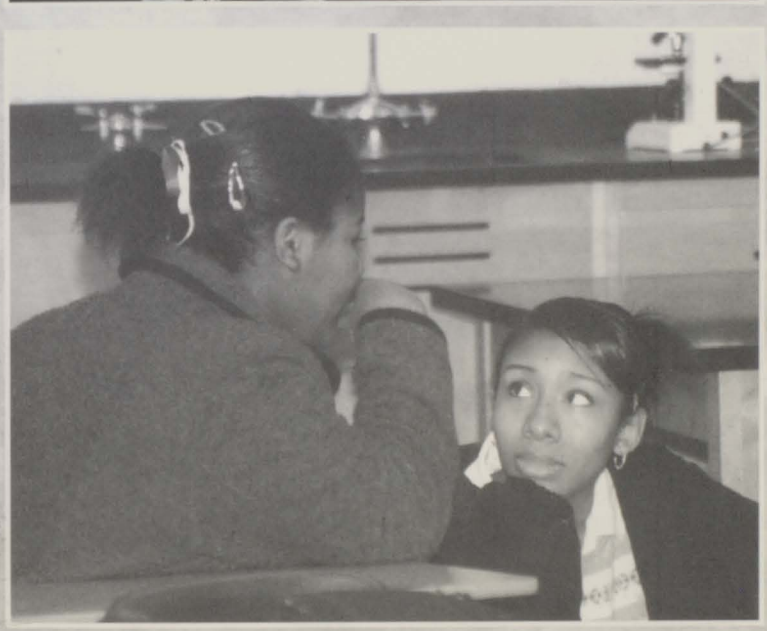

Wake up,wake up, the sky is falling! Senior Cam Snow uses his time wisely by taking a quick nap to refresh his thoughts. With a concrete bench for a bed and a bookbag for a pillow, who would not be able to fall asleep?

It's a knee slapper! Sophomores Jessica Robinson and John Wright share a laugh before class. Laughter made a difference in a stressful school day. Without laughter the world would be a very dull place.

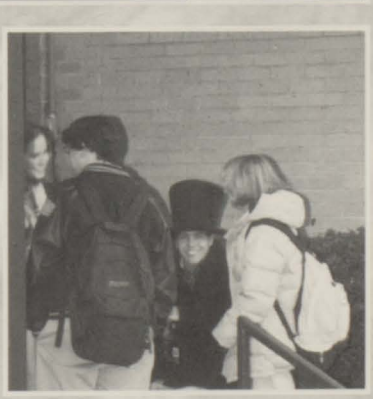

Peek-a-boo,I see you. Junior Brian McBrearty hides in a locker to avoid the camera. The locker room was usually a place for gym clothes and sneakers, but he thought it would be just as good of a place to hide.

Please let it be chicken day! Eighth graders Matthew Widner, Brandon Mahoney, and Adam Smith check the lunch menu to see what meal is up for the day. Because of the variety of choices in the lunchroom, they found it hard to choose just one meal.

Shhh... don't tell anybody. Seventh grader Cassidi Flowers shares a secret with fellow classmate Kim Roberts. The female students often shared their inner thoughts about everyday life and about school with each other.

The Mad Hatter returns. Junior Josh Chafin supports a love for fairy tales by wearing a hat that resembles the Mad Hatter from Alice in Wonderland. He used the large hat to escape the pressures of the day.

I'm king of the suburbans! Senior John Hurley boldly goes where no person has gone before, as he towers above the rest of the cars in the senior parking lot. John took reaching new heights literally.

What is English homework for tonight? Sondra Calhoun asks one of her fellow classmates for this important information as she walks down the hall. This was often the method of obtaining a homework assignment.

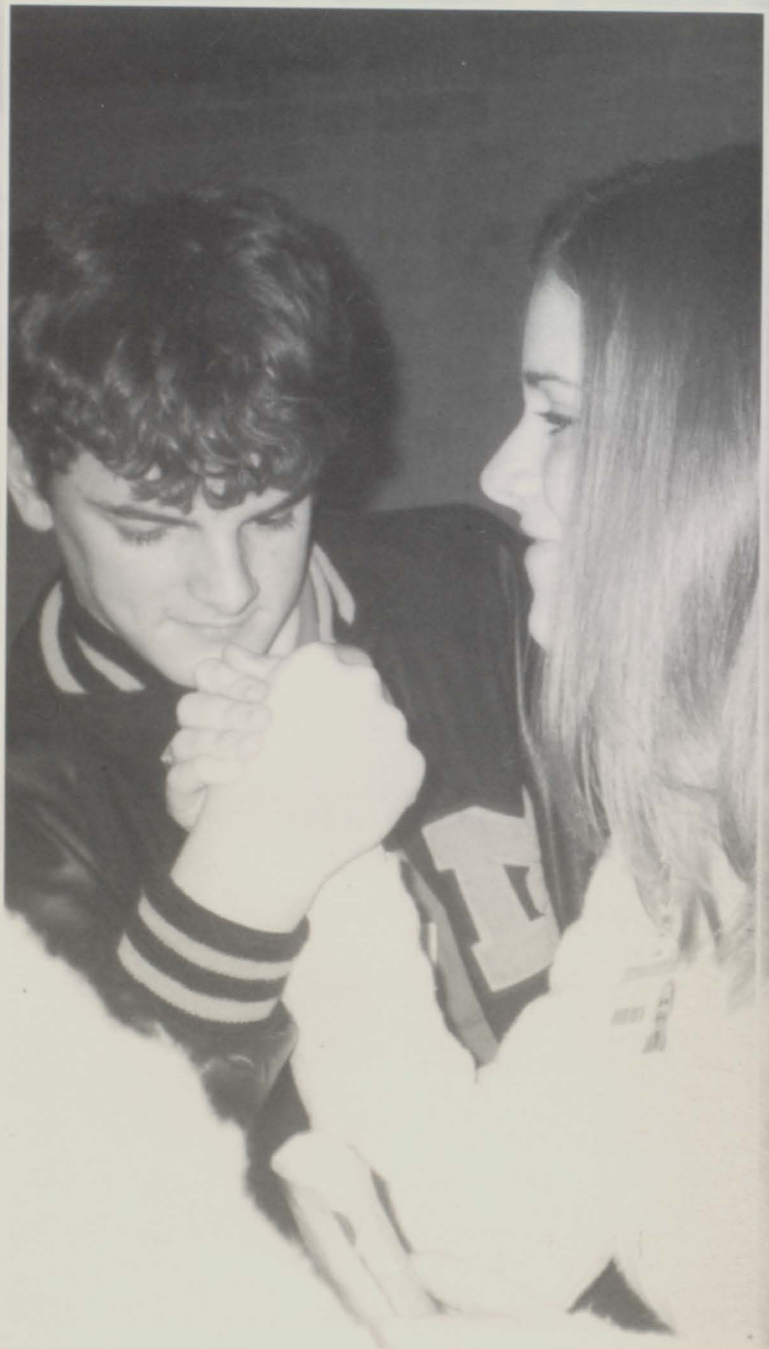

X = 2y...so there are only ten minutes left in this class. Katie Wright finishes her physical science lab as the bell rings to end her class. Students learned to appreciate deadlines and to complete their work in a timely fashion.

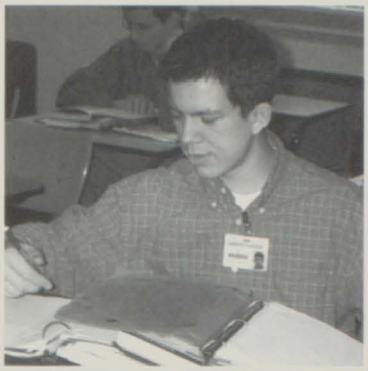

This one is going to be perfect... Joanna Akin meticulously ties a ribbon to a Homecoming decoration in preparation for the upcoming school celebration. Student Council played an important role in making Homecoming great.

Wow...this collage looks really good. Andrew Dockrell and Danielle Grinstead busily cut paper during their art class. Art classes have allowed students to express themselves freely and in a way that words cannot.

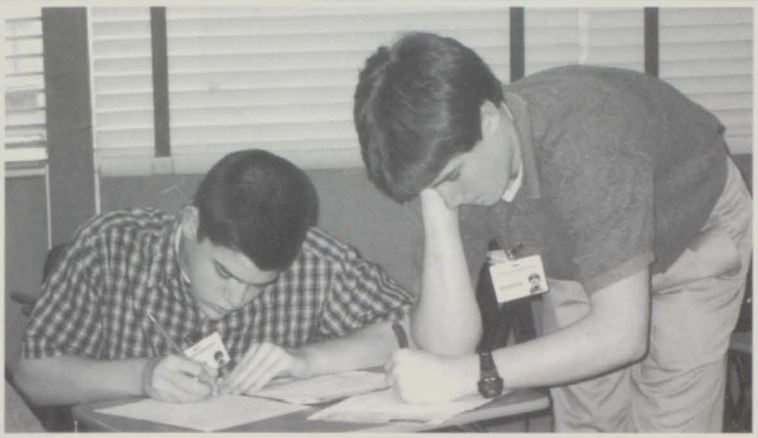

I'm the strongest woman in the world! Caroline Freliche and Erik Hardison battle vigorously in an arm wrestling match. Student relationships were often built on having fun and joking around in spare time.

Ah man...if only I had finished this homework last night. Jesse Pilkenton scrambles to finish his previous night's homework before the teacher comes around to check it. Many students have tried to pull this off but did not succeed.

Can you help me with this? Blake Mears and Daniel Harris work steadily to finish their work. Many times classmates provided a different perspective toward assignments, sparking new ideas that made working easier.

Sweet dreams. Blair Slocum dreams away the day as she takes a quick nap during class. Students' exhaustion during class was caused by countless hours of homework and dedication to schoolwork along with extra-curricular activities.

Man, this is hard stuff! William Rather works diligently on his physical science lab to finish before the bell rings. Science was a class required in order to graduate, but it often turned out to be a lot of fun for students as well.

What did you say?... Mary Wiggins gives a puzzled look to her friends as she enjoys a Sprite and some conversation at lunch. Lunch was always a relaxing time away from a very stressful day for students of all grades.

We have all the time in the world... Daniel Bernal and Simon Radomski strut towards the most desired place on campus, the cafeteria. The cafeteria was the favorite spot of students for both eating and socializing.

Serendipitous: able to make discoveries by accident

Hoity-toity: giddy

Mirthful: merry

Acuity: sharpness, keenness

Natty: neatly smart in dress or appearance

A student's job is never done... Danielle Grinstead and Bethany Dadisman discuss that night's homework. Very often, students attempted to get as much of their work done during school as time permitted.

Would you look at that! During study hall, Tony Arena and Brian Benton do research for an upcoming project. The library proved to be an extremely valuable resource for students while they worked on papers and projects.

Giddy-up! Katie Wright makes the most of her time during a practice for the one act play, "The Omelet Murder Case." Drama students had a wonderful time using various props and facial expressions to get into character.

Break a leg! Winslow Rumph plays the part of an English housemaid during the fall production of "The Omelet Murder Case." Drama was a popular extracurricular activity among students of all grades.

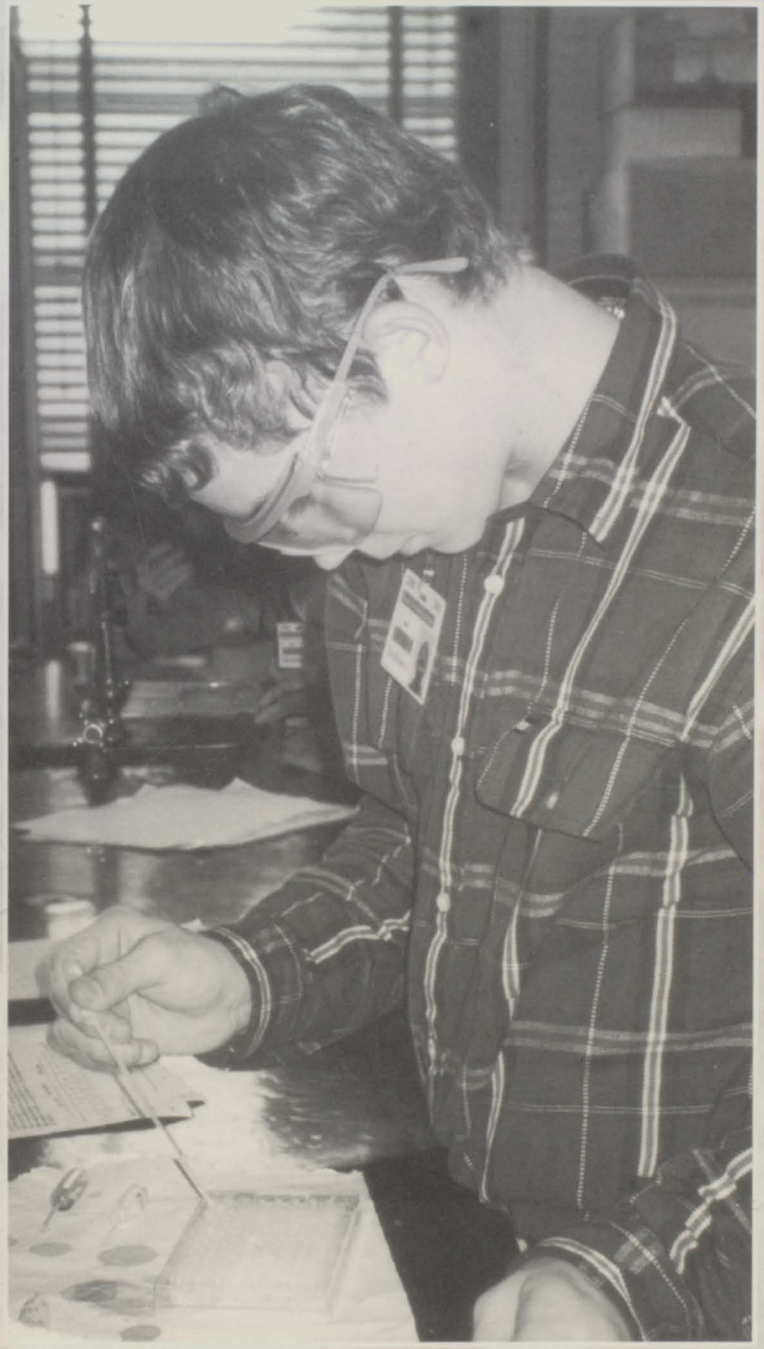

Put up your dukes! Robert Grant and April Anderson joke around as April assumes a boxer's stance. Friends have helped each other relieve stress through jokes and games, taking the focus off school work for a brief time.

Wait a minute... Lindsey Williams stops Erik Hardison outside of Mercy Hall to discuss their plans for the weekend. Many students looked forward to the weekends as a time to relax and have fun with friends.

a fresh look at Life

Jump frogger jump! Kevin Korte plays a calculator game during a break in class. Calculators served many purposes; not only did they help students with their studies, but they also were an excellent source of entertainment.

When does the bell ring? Joey Shackelford and Andrew Dockrell walk casually towards Mercy Hall on their way to class. The four minutes between classes were spent catching up on happenings around school.

A barrel of laughs! This hungry group of freshmen boys happily enjoys the remaining time during their lunch period. Students always loved sharing their thoughts and opinions over a tasty meal from the school cafeteria.

Double, double, toil and trouble... Eric Roberts intently focuses on his physical science lab in hopes of having good results. Labs taught students to be patient and extremely careful as they worked with various chemicals.

Can you help me with this? Joanna Akin and Alicia Kelly help each other with their French homework. Learning a foreign language was a challenge, and many students often consulted one another on pronunciation.

BIZARRE!

Stupid Sophomore Tricks

Valkyrie Anderson: Has the amazing, bizarre talent of being able to curl her eyebrow and lip with a single thought. 1

Juan Morales: Is able to make his hand create strange forms and shapes merely by rotating his wrist in unusual directions. 2

Catherine Harris: Has the spectacular power of being able to wrap her legs all the way around her neck. 3

John-David Pinkston: Is master of the art of the Yo-Yo and able to perform even the most complex of tricks. 4

Sara Suchower: Is the holder of the painful talent of being able to perform a full cheerleader-style split. 5

Kyle Schuchmann: Has the ability to twist and contort his arm to forms not intended for the human body. 6

Solomon Sewell: Is one of very few people who is able to juggle everything from paper balls to sharp metal knives. 7

Jenna Schmitt: Is able to alter her face, allowing her tongue to touch the tip of her nose. 8

Jason Spicer: Has the almost unique ability of being able to bend his double- jointed thumb. 9

Monty Martin: Is able to imitate a "tripod" using his exceptional arm strength. 10

Keep your eye on the paramecium. Theresa Jurgensen thoughtfully peers into a microscope transposing onto paper what she sees. Labs were much appreciated breaks from the typical biology classwork.

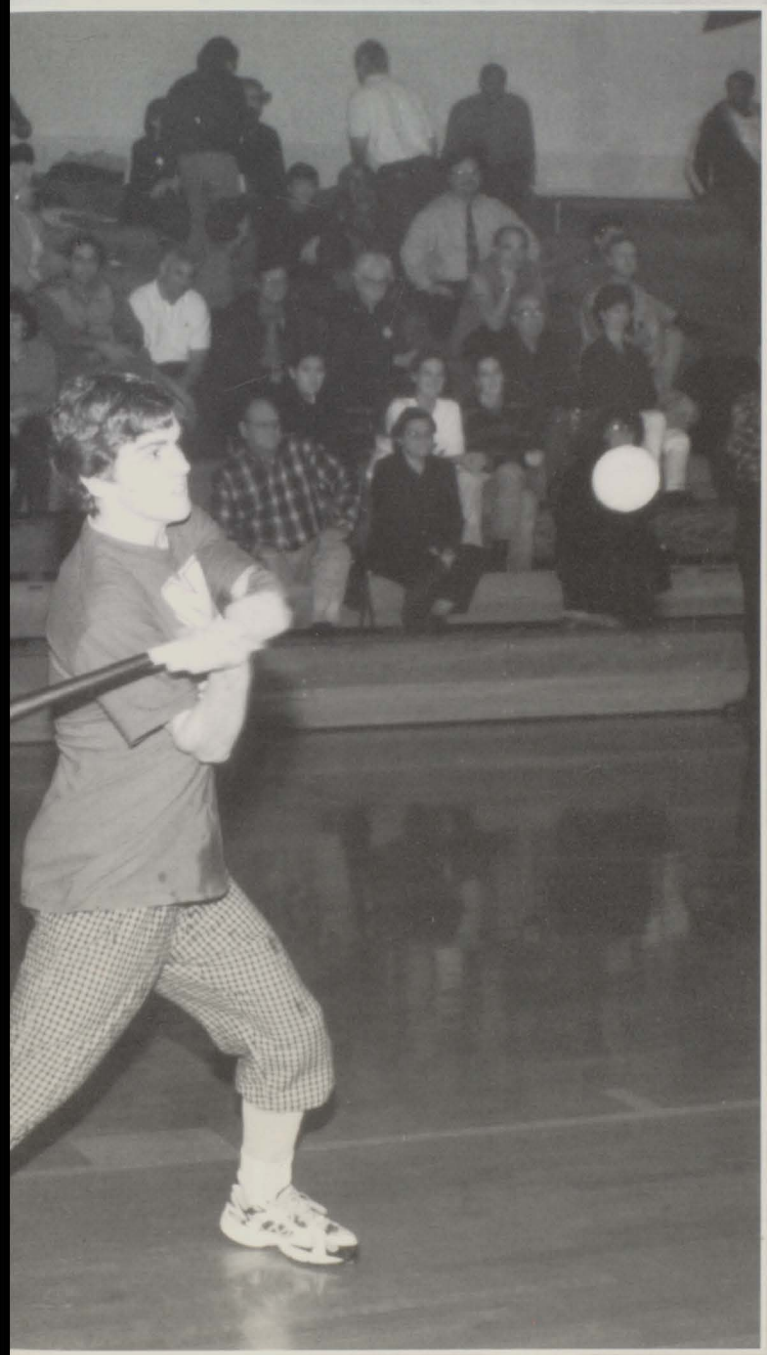

Girls just wanna have fun... Camille Dizon and Jenna Schmitt enjoy a good laugh during their annual retreat. Laughing and smiling have been clinically proven to make even the worst of days brighter.

wild &crazy Kids

During class this is as wild as students get... Jon Lewis wears a serious expression during art class. Choosing how a watercolor should look was a very important decision. There was a time for fun and a time for work.

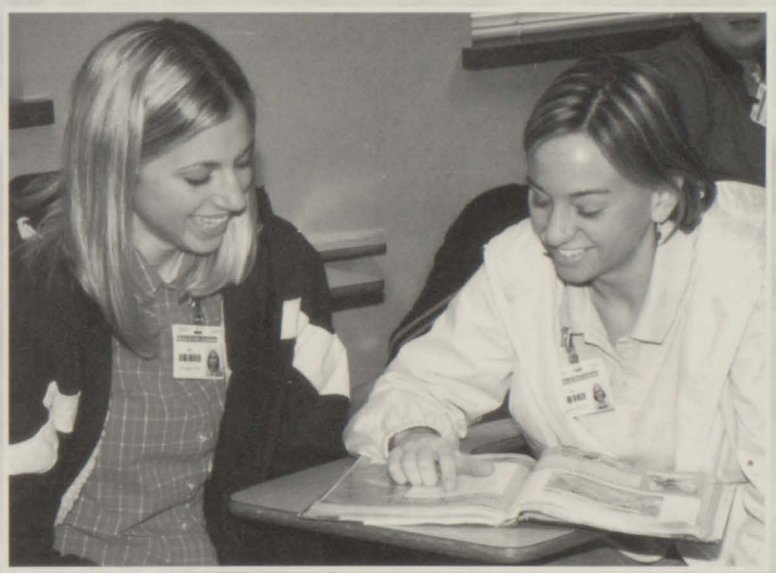

Bad hair day. Kyle Schuchmann models a brand spankin' new hairdo at the retreat. The retreat was an exciting way to spice up the daily routine. Everyone needed time to be silly and goofy, since school caused stress for all.

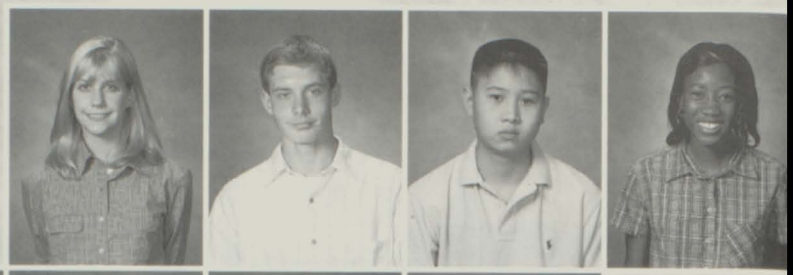

Twist and Shout! Robert Wooley is encouraged by seniors Ben Washburn and David Rumph to learn the correct facial expressions for the chorus rendition of the famous Beatles song. The gentlemen in their outfits impressed everyone.

Eye on the ball. Brian Mears prepares to drive in a hit for his IWBL team, the Rabid Wombats. The IWBL was introduced this year as a fun and crazy way for people to enjoy halftime during basketball season.

Que Decimos. Katie Hatcher critiques Lindsey Pye on the correct pronunciation of the words on the Spanish vocabulary quiz that they have in class. Studying with friends was a fun way to pass a test.

to the future

all shapes and Sizes

Higgledy-piggledy... William Young props himself up on a table to rest. He stood there, with a look of complete confusion, waiting in the cafeteria with his P.E. class, since the gym was being used for another activity.

Bright Sunshiny day. Catherine Leverett soaks up some sun with a smile during her lunch period, dreaming of the day she would have off campus privileges since only seniors were granted that luxury.

Just hanging around... This group of students enjoys the time they get to spend together during lunch. They hurried to finish eating before the bell rang so they could make it to their next class without being late.

Saved by the bell... Kristi Beall is saved from a pop quiz in geometry by the sound of the bell. She packed her bookbag as she listened to her homework assignment, even though it could be checked on the internet.

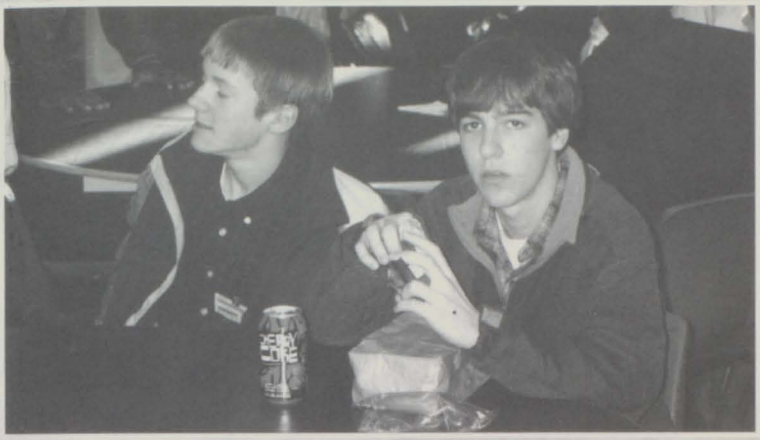

A perfect example of a saturnalian student... Akeem Ramsay decides to spend the last few minutes of his lunch period playing a game of kick-the-can. Foot-eye coordination was sharpened in P.E. and was a useful skill in this game.

All different smiles and faces... This group of sophomores relaxes as their teacher gives them free time during a period. Students cherished the chance to lean back, even though their teachers would have liked them to use their time efficiently.

...Eat and sleep... Jesse Mielarczyk gobbles down his lunch as Sam Meadows takes a quick second to study the insides of his eyes. Eating, sleeping, sports, and girls are the things that often cross guys' minds.

The Many ~~Idiosyncrasies~~ of a

Saturnalian: riotously merry

Otiose: lazy, idle, at ease

Phlegmatic: calm or cool; thoughtful

Higgledy-piggledy: in jumbled confusion

Obstreperous: loud or noisy

Magnanimous: generous, noble

Omnifarious: of all forms or varieties

Roseate: bright or cheerful; optimistic

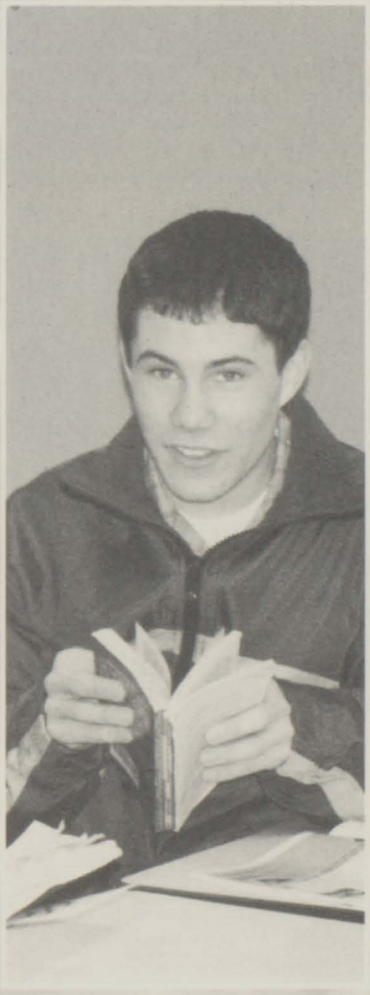

Effulgent: shining brightly

Can they be more obstreperous? Alex Wright looks on in amusement as Drew Edwards shows Ben Smith how to put a freshman in his place. Boys were always the most rambunctious during lunch.

Pensively pondering a placid painting. Audra Nessing considers how she will approach reproducing a painting. The students copied the painting, reworked it in a new medium, and then repainted it.

Effulgent, what does effulgent mean? Monty Martin looks up a synonym for the word effulgent. He discovered that the meaning described the Sophomore Class very well, they shined brightly in everything they did.

Sitting makes them very phlegmatic. Katie Blackburn and Sarah Dessart are lounging on a bench in the trapezoid. Lunch was a great time to regain composure in order to do their best possible work throughout the day.

whistling while we Work

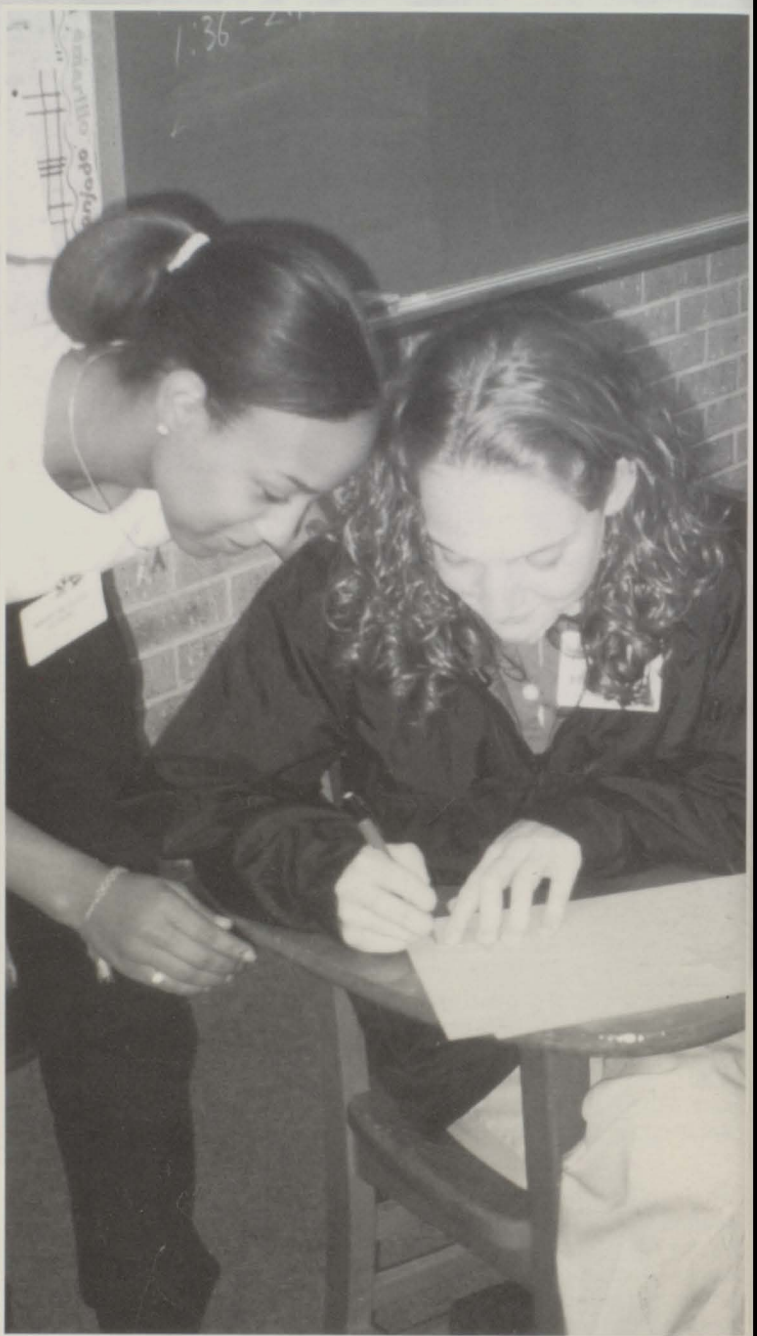

A² + B² = what? Danielle Micheletti ponders mind-boggling geometric equations during a class discussion. As geometry is a difficult subject, students had to work hard to understand the complicated concepts.

What do you mean it's not right? L'Neisha Leslie seeks help from Kris Ivey on her complicated homework. Cooperative learning among students was beneficial to the process of gaining an education.

Just one more sentence before the bell rings. Lydia Sewell frantically tries to finish her work before the class ends. Using class time to complete assignments created less homework for the students and time to pursue extra interests outside of school.

Let's get it right this time! Chorus members Skyler Stull and Jessica Freeman look over their music for chorus and practice to get the notes just right. Students liked to practice so their performance would be perfect.

Help Wanted! Courtney Edington and Audra Orange help each other trace gold stars for the junior Homecoming spirit badges. Juniors wore these stars as a sign of school spirit during a week devoted to that theme.

Four score and seven years ago... Caitlin Murphy shows a fondness for history while working. History has expanded the minds of many students in the junior class and has proven to be more exciting than ever.

To be or not to be, that is the question... Two great minds, Allen Stroupe and Matthew Burns, consider the question at hand while working in history class. Brainstorming in pairs proves that two heads are better than one.

Let's graph this sucker! Brandt Orr, Megan Hickman, and Scott Hatcher watch their graphing calculator with amazement as it solves a difficult trigonometry problem. Graphing became a necessity in order to finish trig homework.

Who's got more files than Agent Scully? Joseph Irwin rummages through debate files for magazine articles and other bits of information he can use to present his case. Having good evidence was essential for presenting an argument.

Thank you very much, Mr. Robot-o. John Cacavias watches intently as Dr. Phillip Olivier demonstrates the capabilities of a robot. The C++ students used this information to write a program that made the robot come to life.

Eureka! I have found it! Ben Mishra is delighted when he finds the right answer to the question on his worksheet. Working diligently has shown students that hard work does pay off with good grades.

The Many Idiosyncrasies of a

Jim Dandy: an excellent person

Uncanny: strange, mysterious, weird

Xamby-pamby: silly

Indomitable: that which cannot be discouraged

Omniugatherum: confused mixture

Rakish: smart, jaunty, dashing

Homework is about this much fun! Lea Hattaway and Shelby Smith discuss their thoughts and methods of studying. While studying was no one's favorite thing to do, it was necessary in order to succeed.

Barq's is the coolest drink around! Jason Glow, Cole Miller and Ben Pierce are all enthusiastic about their drink of choice. Hanging out with friends was the most popular way to spend the lunch period.

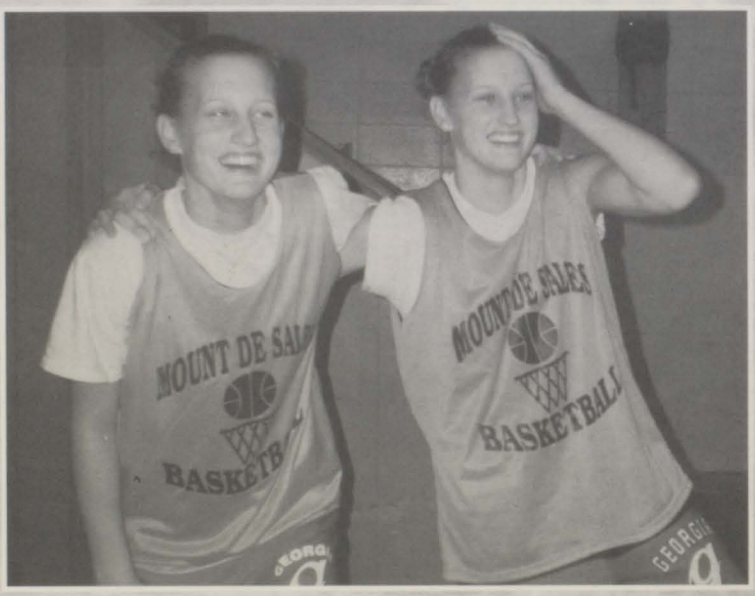

Ooh, la, la... Jenika Cooper becomes acquainted with one of the visiting French students during Cultural Awareness Week. Learning about different cultures and meeting new people during this week were beneficial and fun for the students.

This little ring better shine for me. Carlton McMillan and Kimberly Kelsey thumb through the class ring booklets provided by Herff Jones. Activities such as this reminded the juniors that they only had one year left.

Double your merriment, double your moment of fun... Katie and Jennifer Leverett stand around and laugh hysterically at the camera. After a stressful practice, athletes learned to lighten up and goof off before going home.

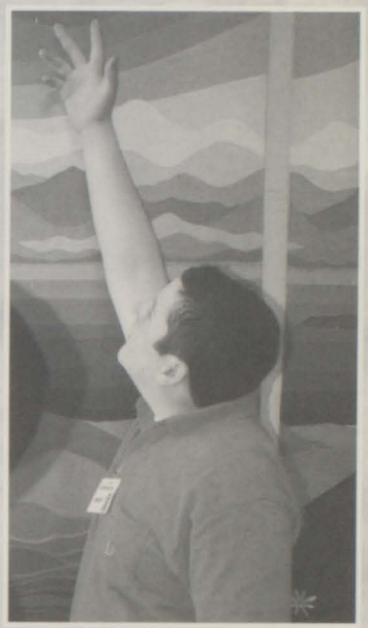

Say What! Brian McBrearty,Caitlin Murphy, and Sarah Harmon are discussing a very complicated matter. Students needed time to socialize with one another in order to better focus on studies when work had to be done.

weird moments in Time

Ouch, what a hair-raising experience! Charley Oxley, Josh Chafin, and Tabatha Roberson find simple things amusing. Waiting after school was the most opportune time to joke around and talk with friends.

And God said, "Let there be light..." Mike Lopapa shows off a mural that displays the beautiful creation of God's work. The mural is located in the chapel, which has been known as a great place to reflect.

Where, oh where could it be? Kevin Matovu searches through and through to find his missing I.D. I.D.'s were an essential item in the dress code. Losing them was often a frustrating and punishing experience.

Where for art thou? Nick Dermatas searches to find his curious friend, Michael Grimsley, who is cleverly hiding in the tree. Finally set free from the confines of study halls, students found interesting ways to amuse themselves.

"I'm a little teapot..." Haley Crawford and Sarah DeLoach demonstrate their version of the teapot dance. This dance proved that the girls are neither short nor stout, and it gave them a chance to be silly and laugh.

standing in the doorway

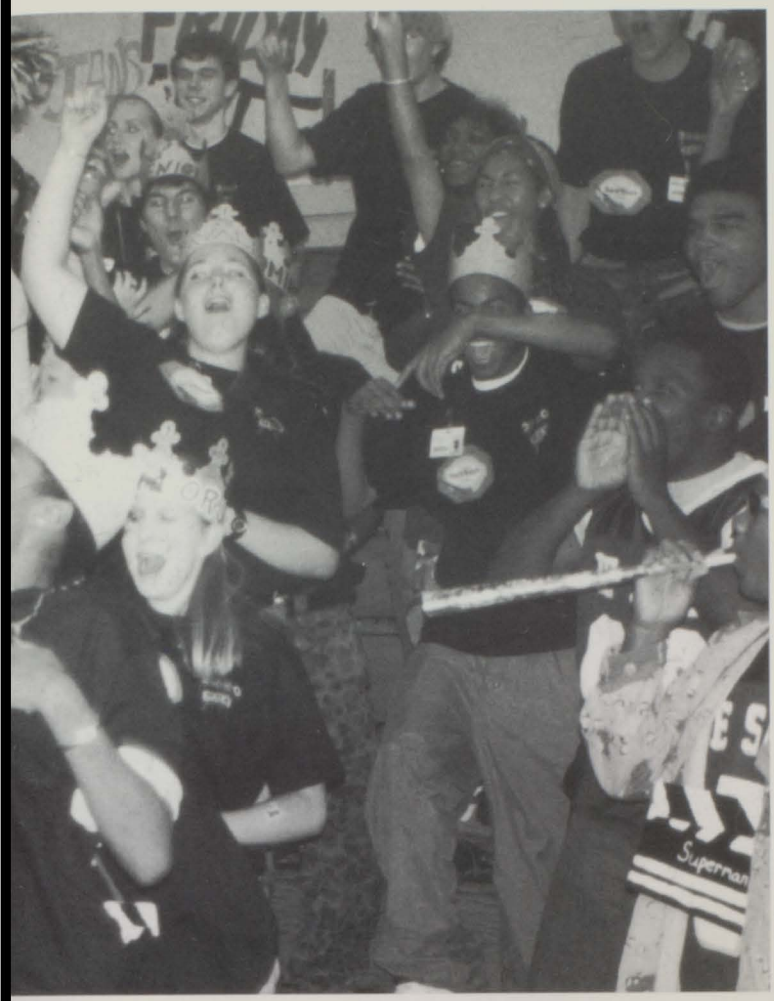

"Life is my [high school]. May I graduate well, and earn some honors!"
-Louisa May Alcott

For many, it is a journey spanning six years, a journey filled with bumps and hills, struggles and accomplishments, a journey we made together culminating with our senior year. Burger King crowns and dreaded term papers, the stress of college applications and "ruling" the school, the tears of joy and despair, the laughter and love- all have gone into making this most memorable year. From the moment we stepped into the halls to the exhilarating last senior run, we travelled with that destination of graduation always in the backs of our minds, and as a class we helped one another along when we thought we could go no farther. With each other, we reached our goals, our destination, and though we may go our separate ways, embarking on new journeys with doors leading in different directions, the door to MDS will always be here, a constant reminder of all the wonders of being a senior.

A senior is someone who wears many hats, lends a helping hand, and walks that extra mile while striving to reach the finish line.

When one door of happiness closes, another opens, but often we look so long at the closed door that we do not see the one that has opened for us. -Helen Keller

This is for the cool in you! Daniel Castresana gets into character by striking a pose in class. Many students could not help but adopt different and new personas on dress-up day.

Rollercoaster of cheer! The senior class shows that they have the Cavalier spirit during the Homecoming pep rally. Each class received points for their participation in the assembly.

"My happiest moment was when they announced the seniors won and we all went crazy." - Jennifer Nelson

"Homecoming week was cool. The dance was alright and the bonfire was awesome." - Justin Schuchmann

Double the fun! By dressing up as Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum , sisters Jenny and Carla Paschke earn participation points for their class, proving that school pride is a family affair.

The excitement mounts! Patrick Cassidy and Ben Washburn are admist the joy at the traditional bonfire. Homecoming would not be as memorable without this cherished school event.

Art in motion! Eden Taylor lends his expertise to help create the senior Homecoming banner. Eden was one of the many students that participated in the week's numerous activities.

Hollywood swingin'

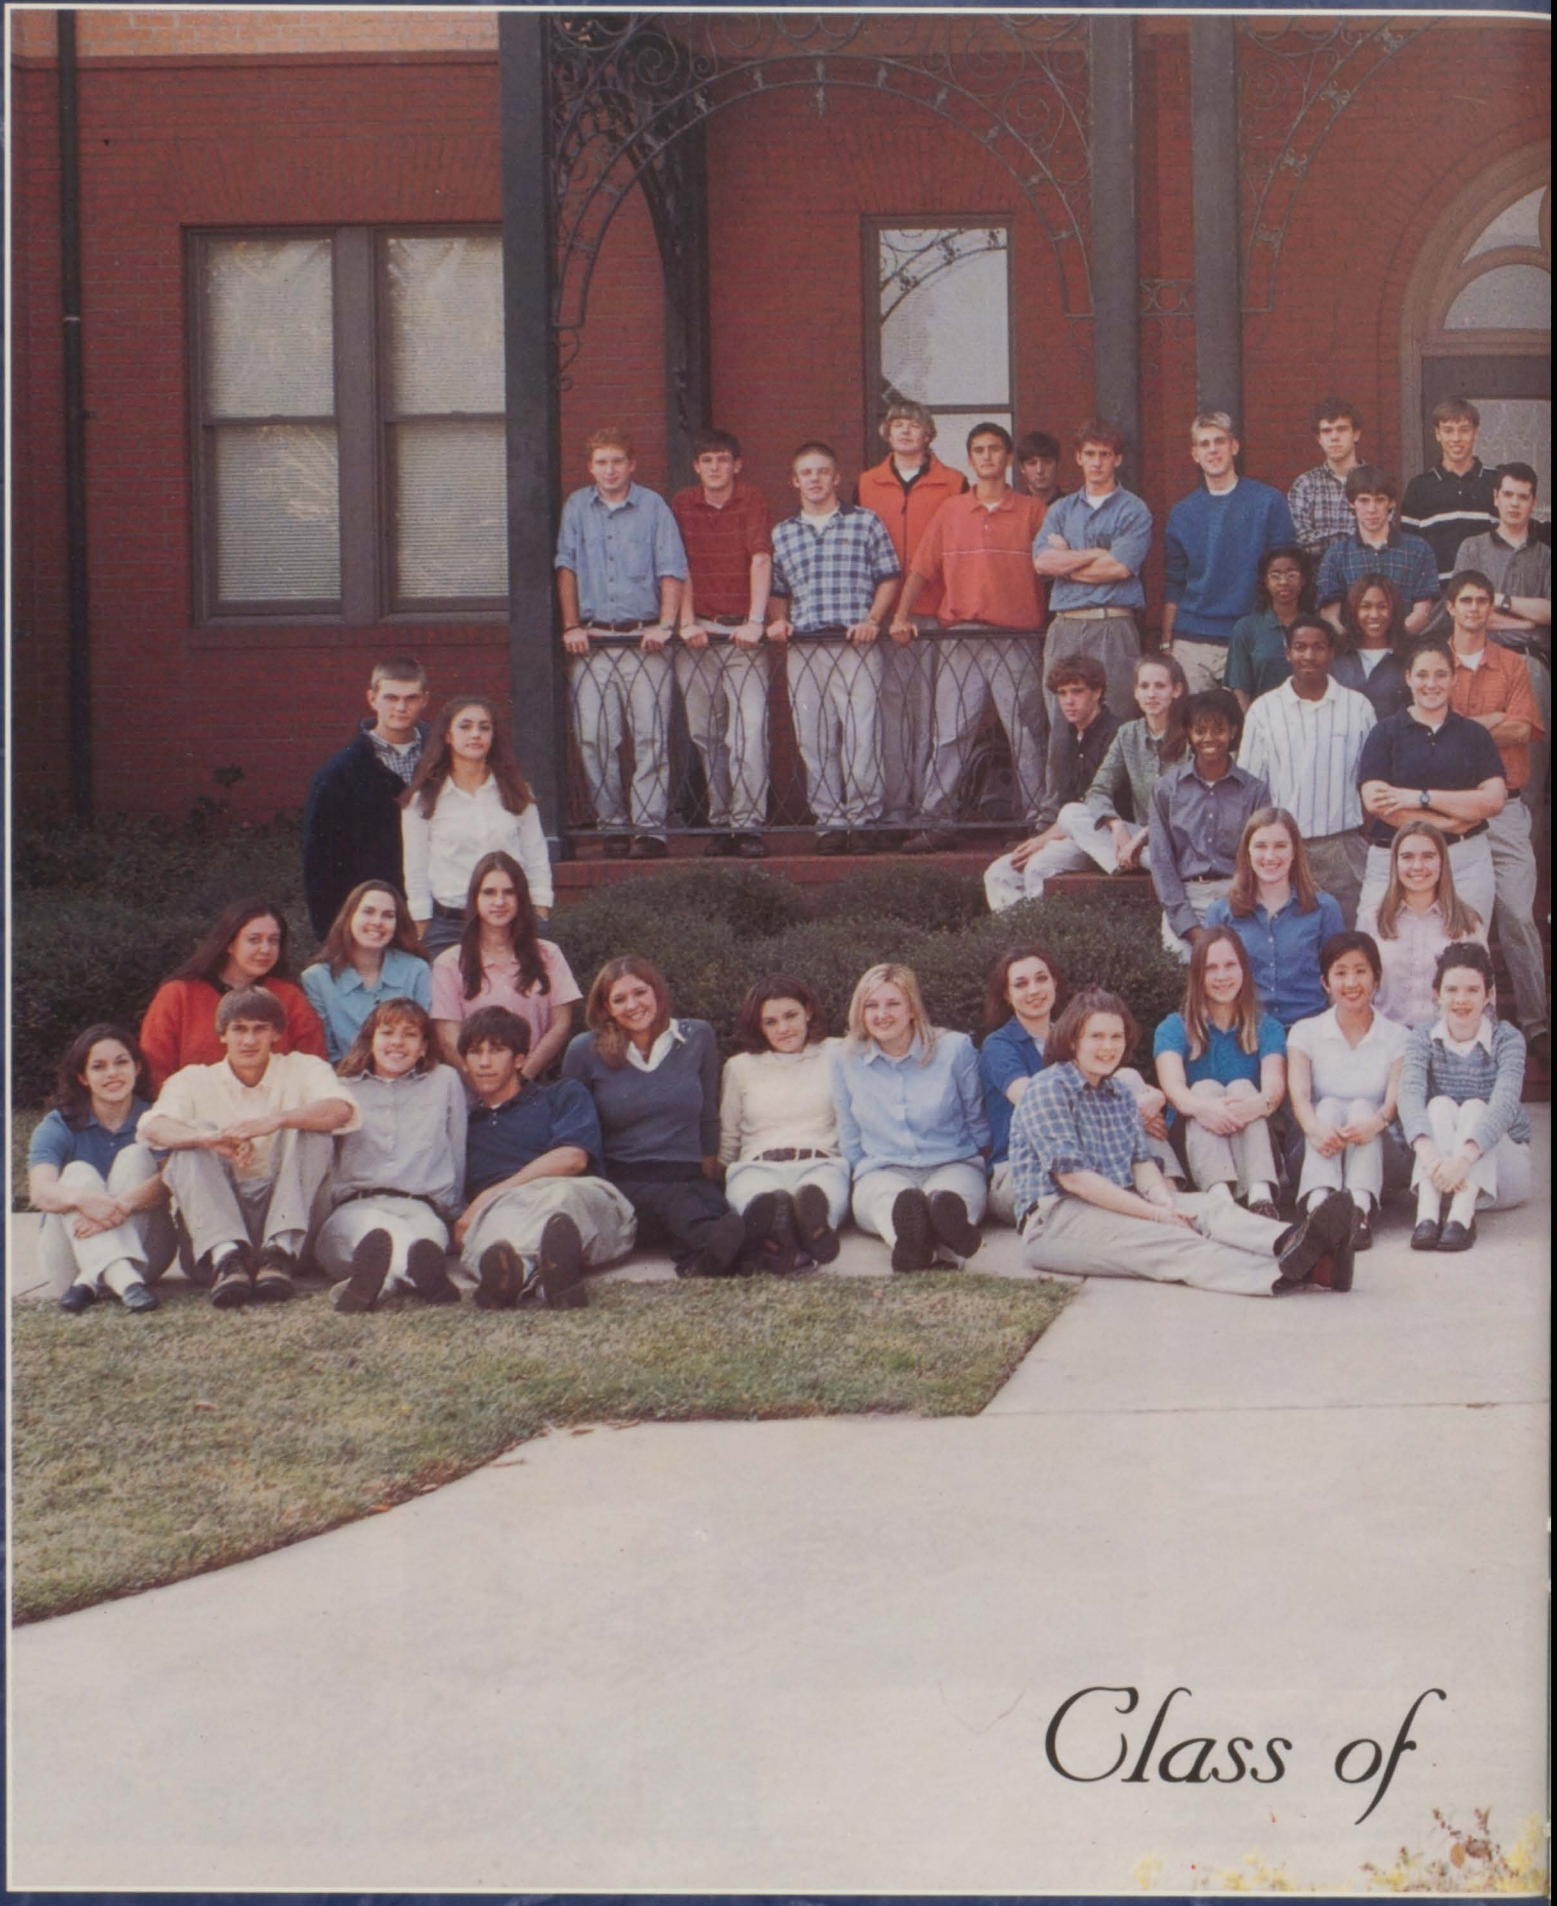

And at the top of today's news... Student Council co-president, J.P. Shelby, is pumped for the morning announcements. J.P. helped inform the students of the week's activities.

There's nothing like a parade to lift spirits! Billy Shackelford and Jessie Rosa, along with the other representatives of each class, model their very festive costumes to the student body.

I'm so excited and I just can't hide it! Senior Georgia Ragonetti squirms in her seat in anticipation of the big Homecoming pep rally. The Cavalier spirit filled all the participants of the school assembly.

Breakin' bread As the seniors gather together in a giant circle in order to have a special prayer service, Patrick Cassidy and Genevieve Olivier munch on the delicious "Bread of Unity".

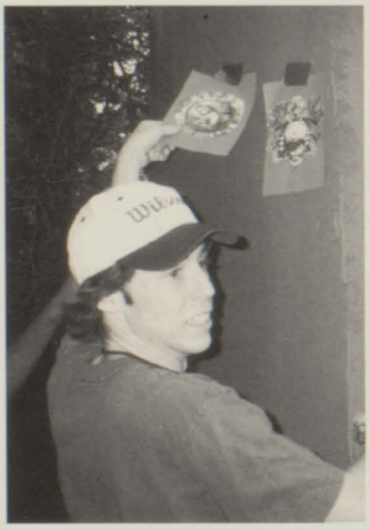

Representing the best John Hurley, Adreanna Jackson, Wes Nichols, and Brian Slocum each light a candle on behalf of their tribe. This ceremony signified unity that grew during retreat.

Survivor the last retreat

Get a clue! Justin Schuchmann is overloaded with excitement as he finds a clue for his tribe. Each clue that the tribal members found was used to help them find the key to the treasure chest.

We are family After doing some serious bonding, this tribe of seniors felt a whole new closeness to one another. Retreat helped seniors go beyond their circle of friends and gain new ones.

Onga - Bonga - Wonga! Mandy McClung generously braids colorful tribal decorations into Julia Brost-Clark's hair. Their tribe successfully became the Ultimate Champion Survivors.

Now just a little dab of ketchup.... Elizabeth Mason adds all the necessary condiments to her hamburger. All of the seniors worked up a huge appetite during the class retreat.

"I'd Go A Long Way For A Nu-Way" Keri Beth Tidmore indulges in the free lunch given at the retreat. The Alumni Association kindly provided Nu-Way hamburgers and hotdogs for the seniors.

Slow and steady wins the race! J.B. Trentadue, Blake Ballard, and Brittany Graham carry Jenny Paschke on a man made "stretcher". This challenge promoted trust between the seniors.

What's Best About Being A Senior??

10. Traditional senior run
9. Friends
8. Being rowdiest at pep rallies
7. Going to college next year
6. Getting to leave home, Macon, etc.
5. Senior parking lot
4. Not having second semester finals
3. Graduation
2. Seniority
1. Off Campus Privileges!

A studious "senior"ita. Margo Gentry's interest in English is piqued while studying diligently. Seniors looked forward to graduation night, but knew they could only get there "by the book."

Gone ape! Ben Washburn makes a silly expression to help take some seriousness out of the long school day. A sense of humor was the secret ingredient to many great and memorable times.

After school cruisin' Liz Pearce and Jana Mann enjoy the wind blowing through their hair after school. Even though a space was not always guaranteed, the seniors had the privilege of parking in their own lot.

Destined to become....

I am Cornholio! Spencer Stull shows off his acting skills as he puts on his costume and gets into character. Spencer made everyone laugh hysterically with his great and goofy impressions.

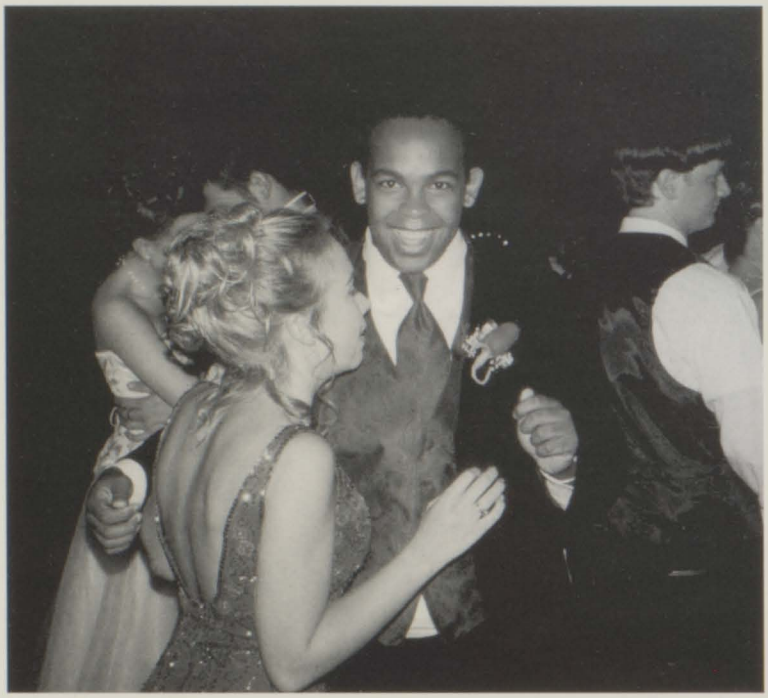

A senior's life of leisure. Ivey Miller and Chris Lockwood enjoy a little relaxation during their free period. A break away from classes was worth its own weight in gold to most seniors.

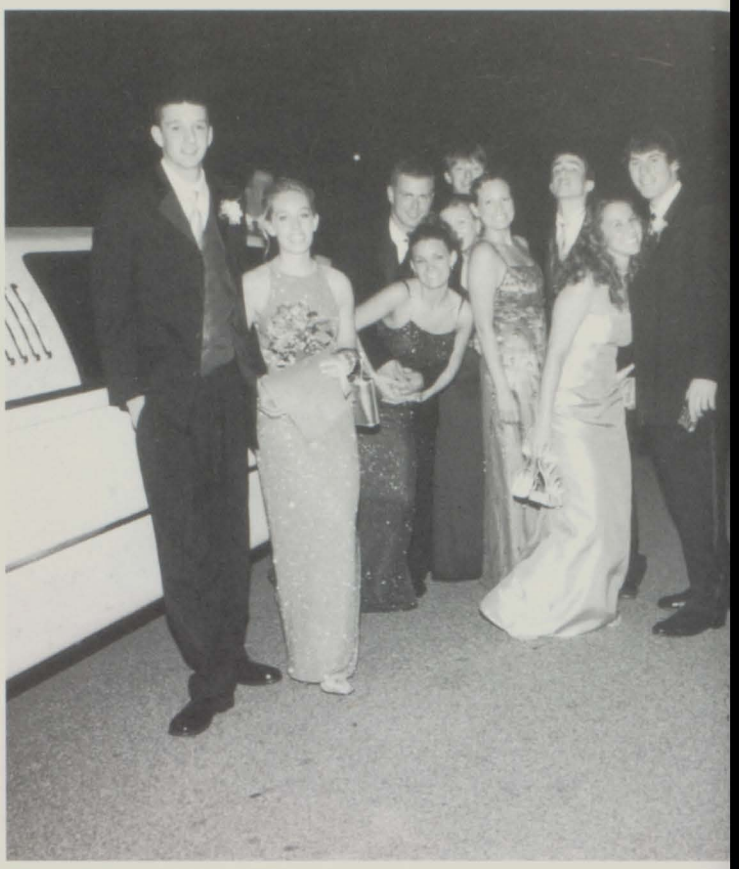

Draw four...Skip you...UNO! Lindsey Holder defends her title as the ultimate UNO champion. Seniors spent as much time as possible embroiled in this cherished card game.

Rock steady. Kirk Davenport and Terri Tyson laugh as they dance the night away. Kirk and Terri were among the many seniors who put on their dancing shoes and enjoyed the music.

Prom bound! Two snazzy groups of prom-goers step out of their limos ready for a fun filled night. Many spared no expense, choosing to enjoy the luxury of a chauffered night on the town.

Dance Like An Egyptian

You ought to be in pictures. Carman Bell poses with her date before the seniors line up for leadout. They were eager to see what this magical night on the Nile had in store for them.

It's my time to shine! Nick Brown flashes a debonair smile as he and his date, Randi Warren, are presented at leadout. Many seniors were nervous, yet excited, to finally have their time in the spotlight.

May I have this dance? Chris Lockwood slow dances with his date, sophomore Audra Nessing. Whether slow dancing or swing dancing, couples enjoyed spending time with one another at the prom.

Men in Black. Secret agents Justin Schuchmann and Matt Lorge prepare for a night of fun. For these buddies, the prom was a great break from crime fighting and detective work.

Now here's how it's done! Brian Slocum gets down with his bad self. Even though everyone was dressed in formal attire, the tuxedos and gowns did not stop them from having fun.

Egyptian queens for a night. Crystle Roberson and Adreanna Jackson momentarily leave their dates to smile with each other. Last minute picture-taking was done before the fun got started.

PROM Horror Stories!

"Three days before prom, my date cancelled. I didn't find another date until the night before! That morning, I found out my tuxedo shirt was three sizes too large. And to top it all off, I was informed that my limo wasn't working, so I had to drive!" ~~John Norfleet

"The horror started when my date, who was supposed to be a great dancer, declared our slow dancing merely "swaying." He insisted on trying to "teach" me how to dance, waltzing me across the dance floor and bumping into everyone!" ~~ Carla Paschke

We've got spirit, yes we do! The entire class proves to everyone how great it is to be a senior. Traditionally, seniors have worn Burger King crowns, but they were made extra special with the Backstreet Boys on the side.

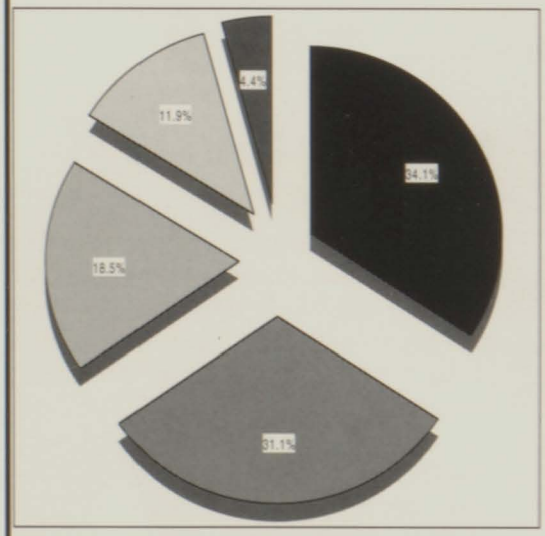

Wanna hear a funny story? Lea Mitchell explains one of her infamously silly stories, while acting out the part. Seniors displayed their personalities in many different ways.

As a senior, what are the 5 most stressful things in your life?

Two and four and... Sarah Harrison shows her rowdy spirit by laughing and wearing a sparkly sequined hat. Pep rallies were where the seniors showed the majority of their spirit and senior pride.

Glitter, shimmer, and shine... A group of seniors decorates the names that were put on the "date wall" for the Homecoming Dance. The seniors won the spirit competition held during the week.

Dancing in the hall. Royce Collins and Julia Brost-Clark show their excitement after passing a test. Knowing they would keep their free period privileges came with large amounts of joy and decreased amounts of stress.

Stress stinks spirit works...

Get out of my face. Kate Haney glares unhappily at the fact that she has to go and wait outside before attending a speech. The Senior Class had a day's break to attend an economics lecture at Wesleyan College.

Just a couple more minutes... Nick Miklowski takes a moment to catch up on some zzz's that he missed. As the year came to an end, the huge number of decisons the seniors had to make wore them out.

Gonna get STOMPED! Michelle Bentley demonstrates the stomping technique the basketball team will use against their opponent. Mary Heenan looked on and agreed with amusement.

Now there were shepherds in that region... Julia Brost-Clark and Florence Bivins tell the story of Jesus' birth. The readings were special because they told of the many wonders of Christmas time.

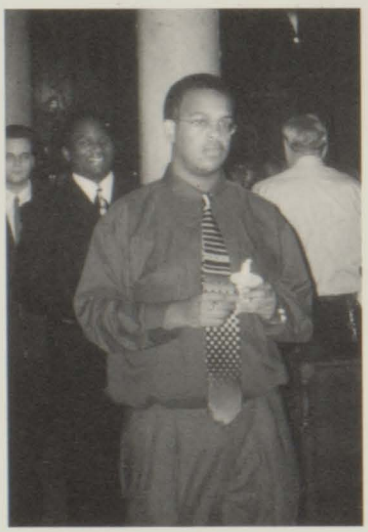

As the seniors go marching in. The seniors parade in two-by-two to start the beginning of a beautiful evening. This is a night that will remain in the minds of seniors for many years.

Lighting the way to Christmas

Don't go out, don't go out. Kirk Davenport cautiously walks in with the seniors at the beginning of the service. St. Joseph's Church was made even more beautiful and peaceful by the light of the congregation's candles.

One more candle to go. John Hurley and Billy Shackelford complete their job as candlebearers. Many candles were lit throughout the night to symbolize the full illumination of the Lord.

I am the light of the world. Brittany Graham stands proudly holding her illuminated candle. As in years past, many seniors participated as candlebearers and readers for the service.

With highest honors. Sr. Rosina enjoys a moment with co-valedictorians Carla and Jenny Paschke. The many accomplishments of all the seniors were a great source of pride for Sister and the entire school.

Honorable graduates

Lord have mercy. Keri Beth Tidmore receives the Sisters of Mercy award. This award was given to the senior who was outstanding in leadership, service, and integrity.

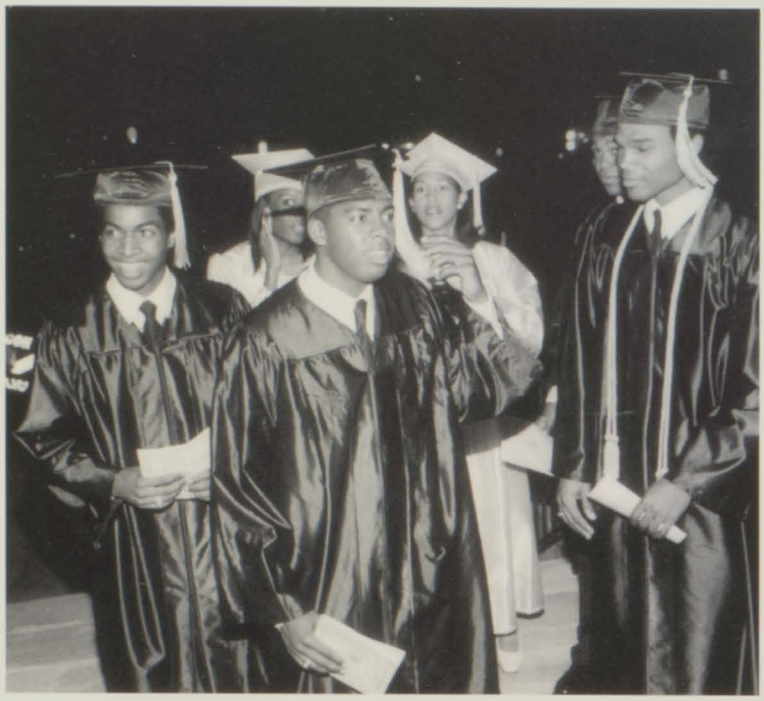

An addition to the collection. Royce Collins thanks Sr. Rosina for his plaque. Members of the senior class received plaques for participation in athletic and literary competitions.

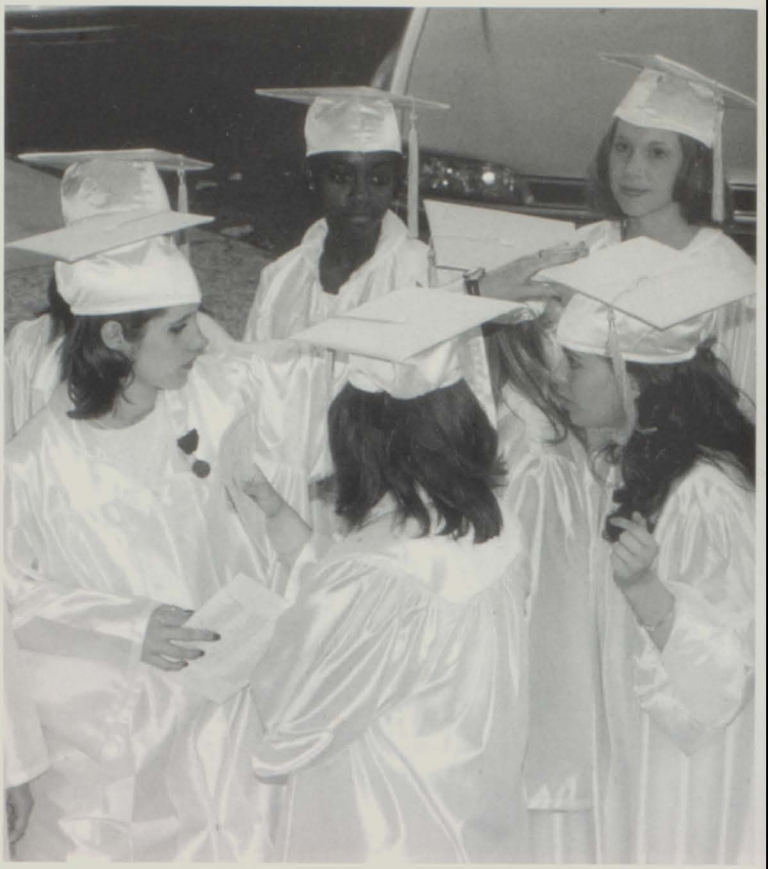

Something to smile about. John Hurley and Michelle Bentley smile together after the senior honors assembly. Both John and Michelle received recognition for their participation in drama.

All smiles. Rashad Tharpe and Nick Brown turn their frowns upside down as they realize that the mass is about to begin. Seniors were both excited and sad that this was their last mass together.

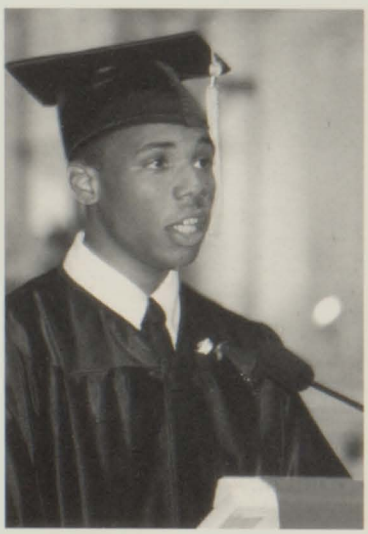

Dressed to impress. A group of senior girls helps each other primp before Baccalaureate begins. The girls wore white gowns while the boys wore blue, and all caps had to be parallel to the ground.

Our Last Mass

Prayers of the faithful. Justin Bundrage says a prayer for the seniors. Prayers of the faithful were dedicated to parents, faculty, ministers, and others who helped the seniors along the way.

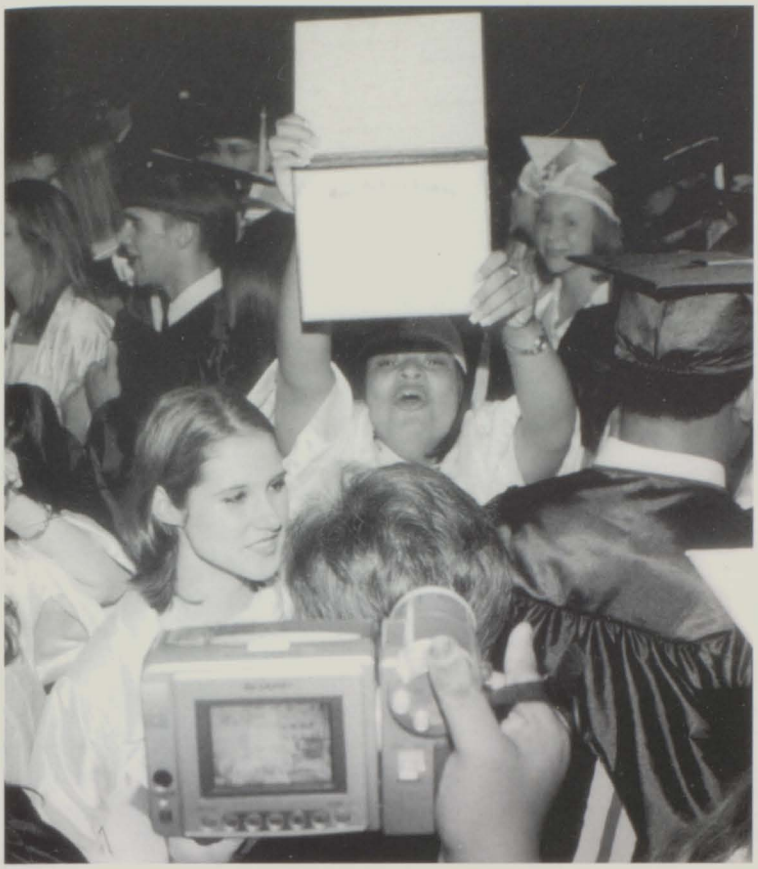

Ladies and gentlemen, the class of 2001! The senior class stands as each person's name is called. After everyone was called, the students received a standing ovation from family and friends.

Left right left. Genevieve Olivier and Terri Tyson are the first ones to march into the church. Although they were nervous, seniors had to keep in step to have a smooth, graceful entrance.

"I finally got it!" Crystle Roberson holds her diploma up high for the whole world to see. All thirteen years of school became worth the wait when seniors were given their high school diplomas.

Its party time! Seniors rejoice after the graduation ceremony is finally over. They cried both tears of sadness and happiness as they celebrated by jumping, hugging, and shouting for joy.

Our Awaited Destination

With honors. Liz Pearce marches in with the privilege of wearing her honor cord. Seniors who graduated with honors had a GPA of 90 or above while taking two advanced courses their senior year.

New alumni. The seniors enjoy a grand round of applause from friends, family, and faculty as the ceremony is completed. Many seniors could not believe that this moment had finally come.

destination: unknown

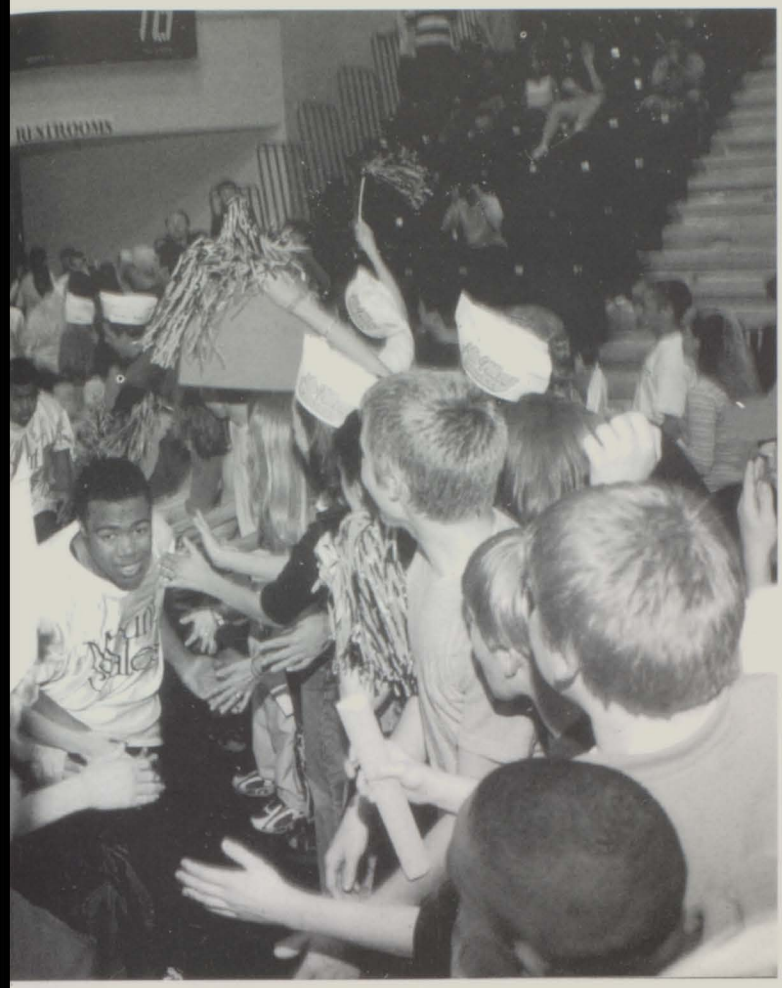

"People rarely succeed unless they have fun in what they are doing."
-Dale Carnegie

When the school year begins each August, the future is a complete mystery. The entire year is one long process of self discovery mixed with the excitement of Homecoming, the fun of Happy Fun Day, and the anticipation of prom. For ten months every student's life is filled with the thrills of sporting events and pep rallies and the stress of research papers and work. And with each new activity comes a new door leading to new and exciting experiences. At the beginning of the year the good times that lie in store are a mystery, but even though the destinations may be unknown, getting there is half the fun.

Whether they are cheering for the team or dancing the night away, students' lives are filled with excitement from August until May.

What did you like best about your retreat?

"We were all very competitive, but we learned how to get along with a competitive spirit. Plus we got Nu-Way!"
-Sarah Harrison,
Senior

"The games helped us learn to work together. We also got to get out at one o'clock!"
-Sarah Harmon,
Junior

"It was a chance to meet the sophomores that were new this year."
-Josh Adams,
Sophomore

-Jesse Pilkenton,
Freshman

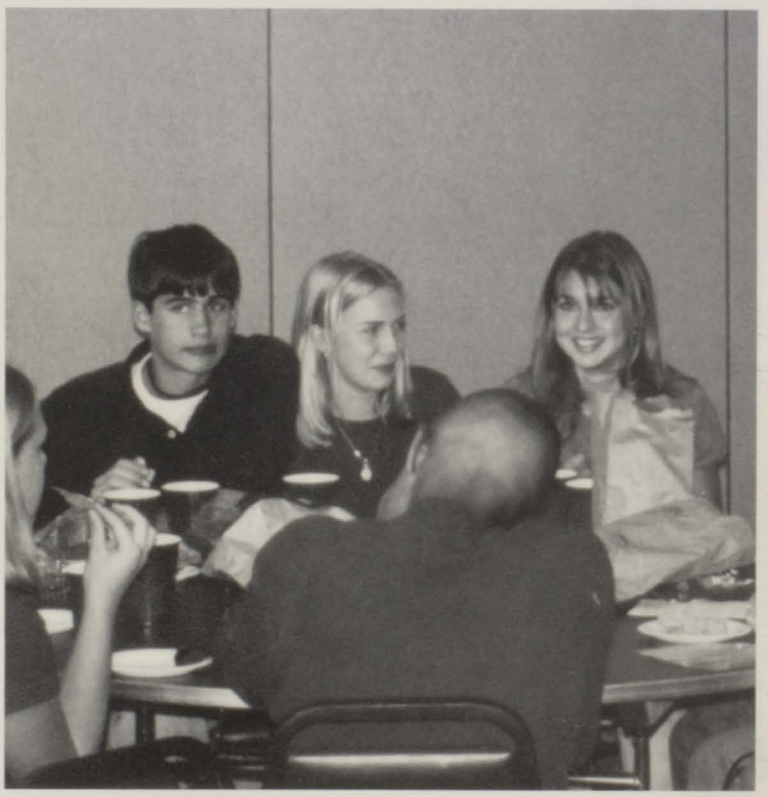

"We got to go to the Georgia Academy for the Blind and helped them to read braille and played games with them."
-Mary Montgomery,
Middle School

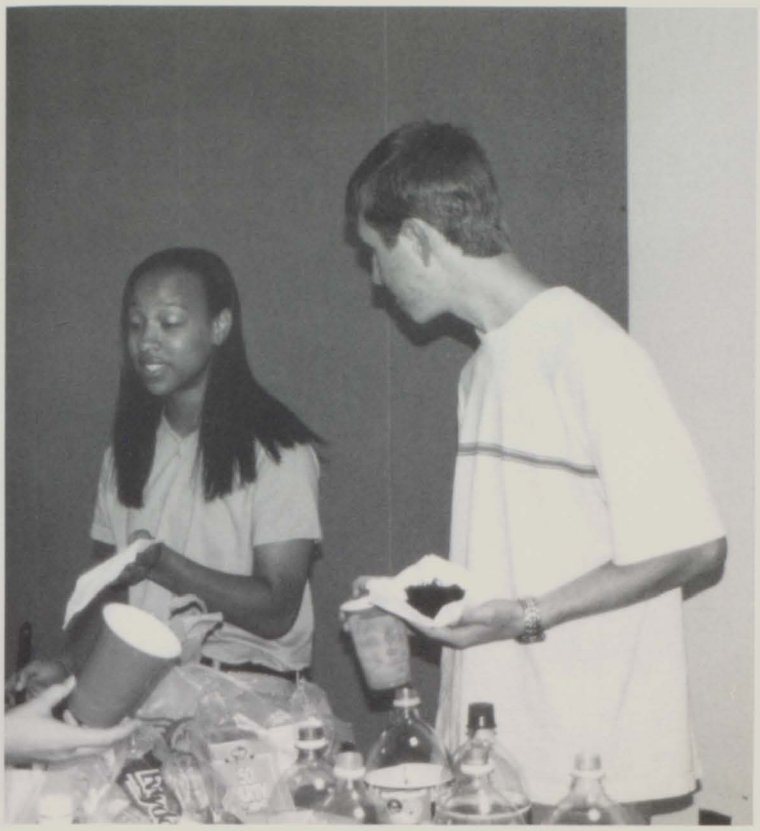

Getting closer together will make anyone smile! L'Neisha Leslie and Maria Rouse share a moment during their junior retreat. Learning about classmates was part of all the retreats.

After meditation, but before play there is lunch! Freshmen Bryan Benton, Laura Stembridge, and Winslow Rumph slow down to eat and chitchat about their retreat. Friends can have fun doing anything.

meeting 'n' kicking off the year with.... retreating

The smile of a child is a great reward! Eighth graders Ashley Dempsey and Jarrett Cooper help the children create beautiful works of art. Glitter, glue and confetti made a mess, but it turned out great.

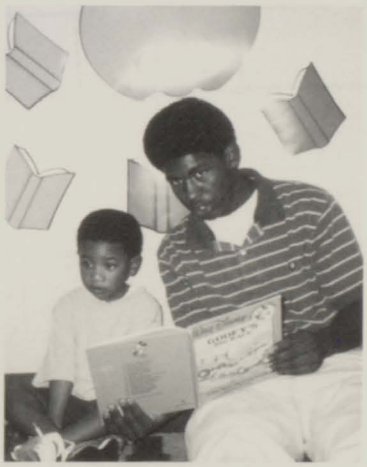

Be sure to save me a brownie! Juniors Colby Mayers and Audra Orange wait patiently in line to catch a bite of food before returning to more extremely exciting retreat activities.

Pizza...it takes care of all four food groups! These seventh graders consume lots of pizza to fulfill their body's every need. Their parents came to distribute this nutritious meal!

Reading is knowledge, knowledge is power! Eighth grader Nashon Bigham occupies children at the Booker T. Washington Center by helping develop their minds and imaginations.

Smile for the camera! Kenyatta Davis spends quality time with one of the children at the Mattie Smith Day Care Center. The seventh grade provided service for local organizations.

When you wish upon a star... While at the sophomore retreat, students looked for ways to express their own visions of light. Emily Pittard drew a golden star to represent her personal interpretation.

It's all smiles for these two! Freshmen Lindsey Williams and Andrew Durr are glad to receive a day away from class assignments in order to get to know each other a little better.

We're all here to lend a helping hand. Junior Brandt Orr proceeds through open hands as students show the basketball teams their support. Fans sent the teams to the finals with a special pep rally on the trapezoid.

Alive with pride. Sophomores Elizabeth Meriwether and Brooklyn Punziano vocalize their spirit. Sophomores pronounced their Cavalier pride in the fan sections, pep rallies, and caravans.

mighty doors that signal victory

Showing our spirit and pride...

The roof is on fire. Seniors Justin Trentadue and Sarah Harrison lead the pack around the bonfire. Spirits were all fired up as Homecoming was rung in with the annual bonfire during spirit night.

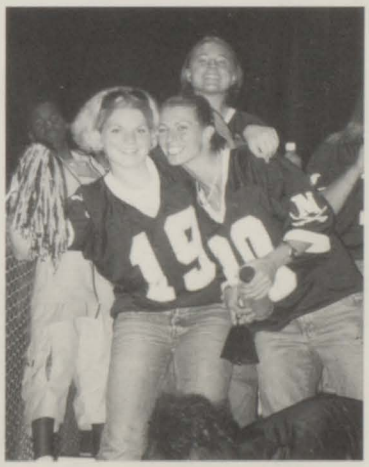

Nu-way is the best way to show spirit. The junior class wears hats to show both their class and school spirit. They also held banners, made noise makers, and led many new chants.

High fives all around. Sophomore Colin Booth extends a high five to Brian Mears as he returns from answering entertainment trivia at skit night. Students enjoyed this first-year event.

Posing for our pride. Junior Kristin Taylor and freshman Lindsey Williams wear jerseys in the student section. Wearing jerseys allowed student to show their pride for the football team.

A little here and a little there. Senior Keri Beth Tidmore decorates her car for the first caravan. This was a popular event that took place before many soccer and football games.

Yeah, yeah, you, you... Students use their intense cheer to cry foul during a home basketball game. The student section's energetic cheer along with many others shook the opposing teams.

Shake, shake, shake, shake your noise makers. Sophomore Ashley Stokes cheers the team to victory. Homemade distractions allowed students to feel as if they were involved in the game.

Now showing: Cavalier Spirit! The seventh graders design their spirit banner. While the seniors won the spirit pep rally and skit night, the middle school was still good competition. Every student had loads of fun during Homecoming week.

Wayne's World, Party Time, EXCELLENT! Sophomore Kyle Schuchman as Garth shows his exceptional Cavalier spirit on Dress-Up Day. This costume was only one of the many that were picked to be in the parade around the gym.

Survey Says? The Junior Class performs their skit about different movie characters and the Family Feud. The cast members included the Crocodile Hunter, James Bond with his women, and of course the host. They got a lot of laughs.

What was your favorite Homecoming activity?

"Dress-Up Day, because we got to dress however we wanted." -Eleni Dermatas

"The Dance, because we got to DANCE!" -Nigel Esser

"The Pep Rally, because we had lots of fun and showed our spirit." -Steve Hollis

"The Skit Night, each class came together with interpretations of Hollywood." -Kristin Taylor

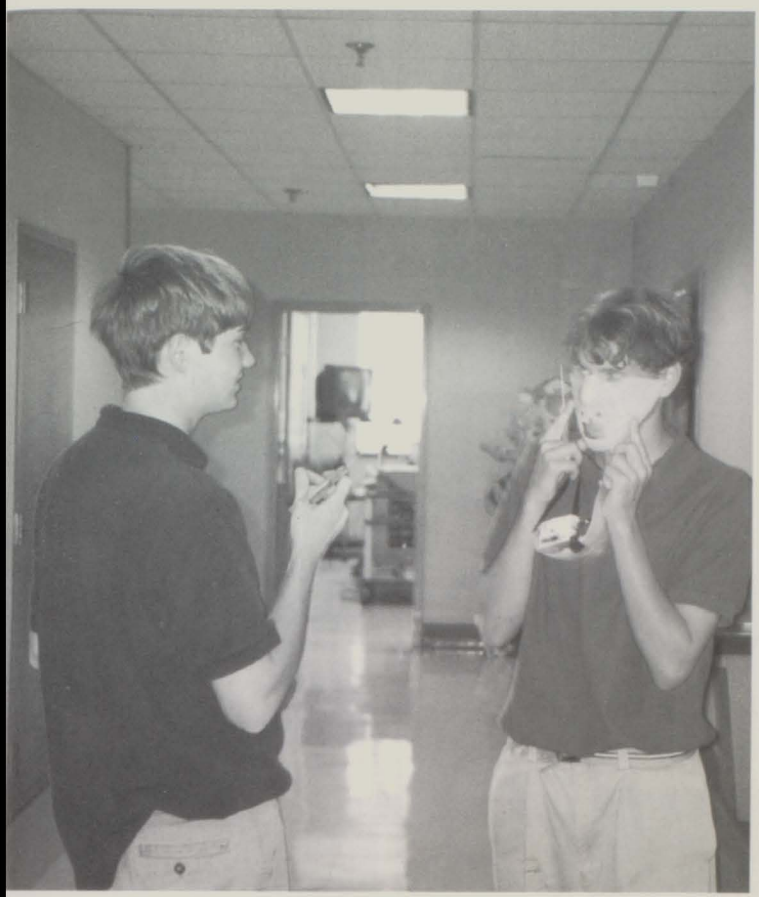

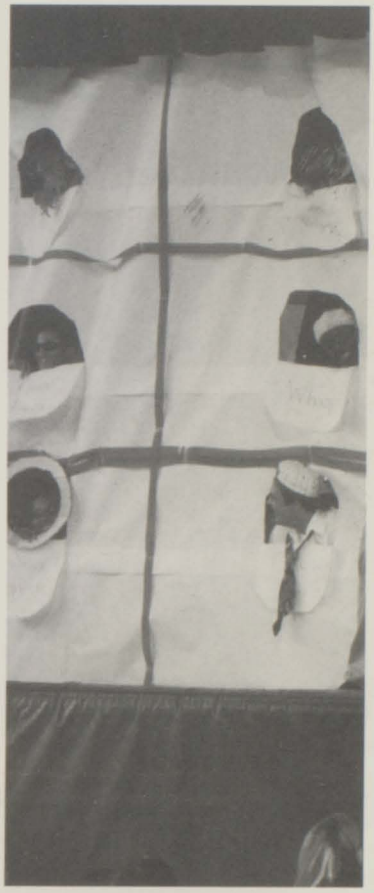

Tip your hats to the Cavaliers! Dustin Neisser, Daniel Castresana, and Jeff Dadisman chill in the trapezoid during lunch to laugh at all of the crazy things they see on Hat Day. All hats had to be worn outside, so as not to disrupt the classroom.

Nothing but an M-D-S PARTY! A mix group of sophomore and senior girls sho each other how to jig, at the Homecomi Dance on September 29. After a hard foug game against John Milledge, everyone ga ered for a good time at the dance.

MdS Homecoming is... unrolling- the -red carpet

Unmasking Hannibal Lector... Juniors Brian McBrearty and Andy Arena try to fix the mask for the junior class Dress-Up Doll. The characters created by the students were inventive and consisted of whatever resources could be found.

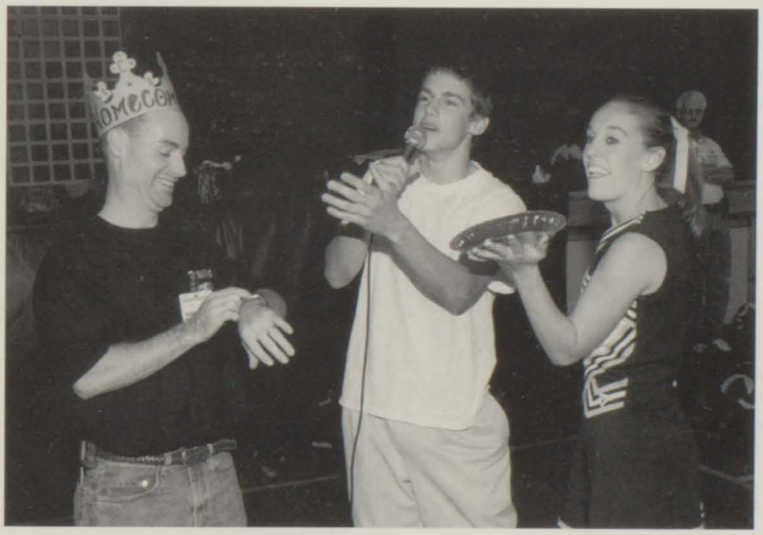

HOLLYWOOD SQUARES! The senior boys skit, a great hit, features Billy Shakelford as the host, "Chuck Wannabe". The host asked "James Brown", Justin Bundrage, about where the Homecoming game would be.

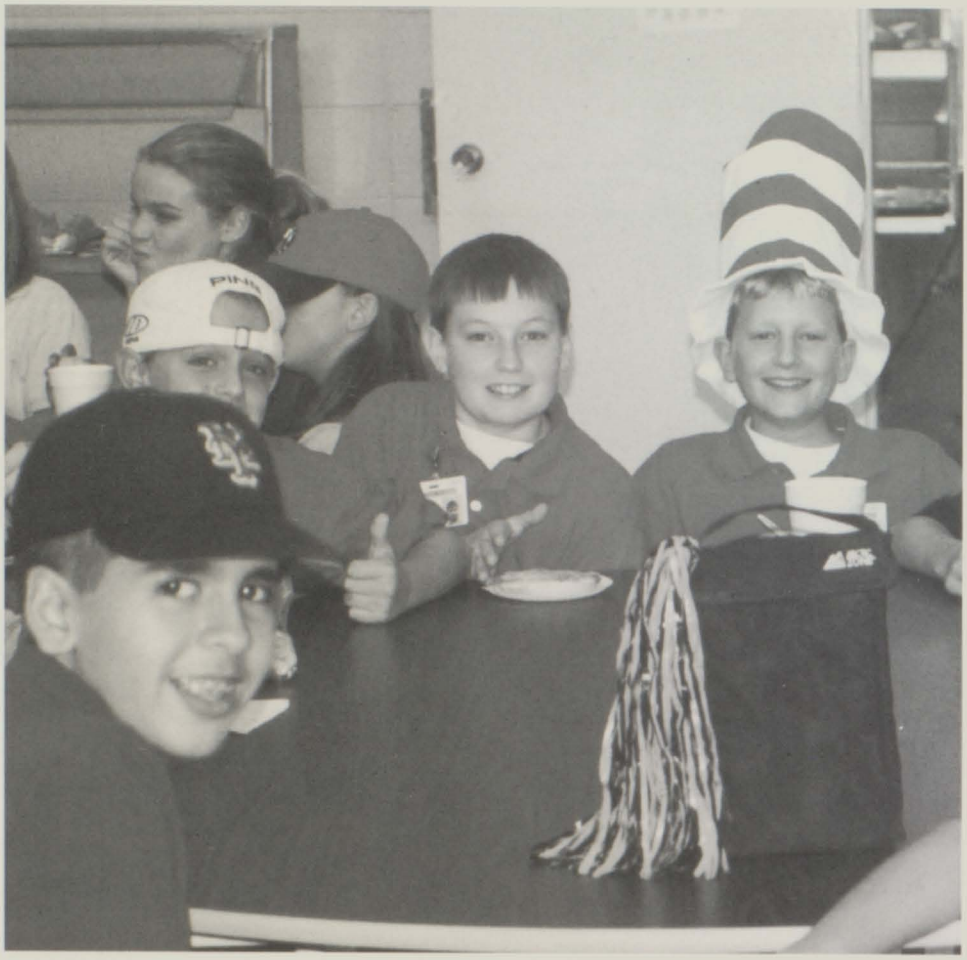

GROOVY BABY! Sophomores Jon Lewis and Terence Heenan teach the football team how to over come the evil trap set by John Milledge. Austin Powers was a great teacher, and the football players ended up winning the game in the skit.

A pie in the face? Sophomore representative Brian Mears was able to talk for thirty seconds without using the words uhh, umm, or like. If he had not been able to do it, Mr. Midkiff would have given senior Lea Mitchell permission to throw the pie.

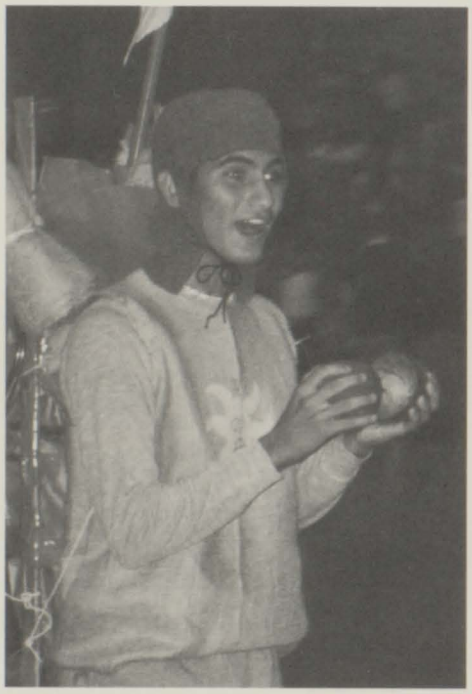

HOMECOMING

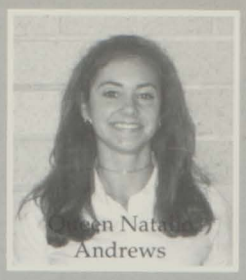

Hats 'R Us! Seventh graders Anthony Rosa, Josh Armstrong, Lee Discher, and David Welesko wear some wacky hats! This shot only captured a small variety of the hats that may have been seen around campus on Hat Day.

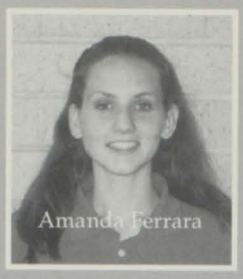

Homecoming is all fun and games! Eighth graders Christine Lopapa and Barry Blitch work very diligently in cutting out materials for their class' spirit badges. This was one of the many activities enjoyed during the week.

What is your quest? Senior Carl Garofalo models the look of Patsy, King Arthur's faithful horse, from the movie Monty Python and the Holy Grail. His creativity helped his group win second place in the group competition.

What's the game plan, coach? Freshmen boys huddle together performing a hilarious football skit that not only portrayed the MDS players, but did a good job representing the characteristics of the coaches as well.

Look it's the Three Amigos! Seventh graders Randy Treiber, Matthew Lewis, and Adrian Martinez come to Dress Up Day in blankets, mustaches, and sombreros. The only thing these friends were missing were their horses.

That's another one for the Juniors... Students race to buzz in, guessing in what famous movie an unknown Hollywood phrase was said. Andy Arena was a dominant force in gaining points for his class with this new event at skit night.

We've spotted sharks! Seniors Ben Washburn and John Norfleet are some pretty cool guys in these forty nine cent "Street Shark" outfits. Not only were they showing off their monstrous muscles, but what an example of school spirit!

Media Covered Assemblies

A large percentage of Americans crowded the polls on November 7 to vote in the Presidential Election of 2000. The Democratic candidate was Vice President Al Gore. George Bush, son of former president George Bush, Sr., was the Republican candidate. To discuss their platforms, both parties held their National Conventions earlier in the summer, where such entertainers as R&B sensation Brian McKnight performed. On January 20, 2001, George Bush, Jr., was inaugurated as the 43rd president of the United States.

Thousands of baseball fans accumulated in Yankee and Shea Stadiums for the 2000 World Series, held in late October. The New York Yankees faced the New York Mets in this "Subway Series," called so because both teams were within a single urban area. In game five of the Series, the Yankees defeated the Mets 4-2, winning their 26th championship.

Numerous people amassed in downtown Macon for the 19th Annual International Cherry Blossom Festival. This spring festival, held March 16-25, 2001, attracted visitors from such countries as Ghana, China, and the United Kingdom. Events included a performance by Macon native Little Richard, the street party, and Fireworks Over Macon.

Many proud families, friends, and mentors assembled all over the country to witness students graduating from high school. The graduates proudly received their diplomas, including the 76 seniors of Mount de Sales' Class of 2001.

What a character! Coach Slocum jokes about senior Ben Washburn at a sports recognition assembly. Sport activities often resulted in deep friendships and memories that would last for a lifetime.

The birthday girl. Among students, Sister Rosina takes her seat in the center of the gym to celebrate her 65th birthday. Every five years, her birthday was celebrated, beginning with her 60th birthday in 1996.

Sacred treasures. Father Sam reads passages from the Bible to ask for God's continued watch over school activities. Gifts were placed in front of the altar to symbolize the students' offering of their time and talents.

make memories Gathering together to... that last forever

Walk of Faith. Accompanied by song, these senior acolytes walk toward the altar. As is tradition, this signaled the beginning of the school's celebration of the Mass as a united community of faith.

Send forth your Spirit. Father Sam stretches his hand to bless the new student council officers. The student body also reached out, showing the support they would give throughout the coming school year.

A taste of the good life. Parents, students, and faculty gather for a picnic lunch held after Sister Rosina's 65th birthday celebration. The spring atmosphere provided a comfortable setting for the outside gathering.

In honor of... Mother McAuley's contributions to the school are recognized as senior Mary Heenan reads a passage about Catherine McAuley's life. McAuley was honored every year on Mercy Day.

A future leader. Seventh grader Stein Esser is honored at an academic recognition assembly. Such assemblies made the honorees proud of their achievements and gave them will power to continue their success.

Where's Waldo? Under this masquerade of costumes are sophomores dressed for a Homecoming Dress Up Day assembly. Such events showed the students' wild sides not normally seen in the academic environment.

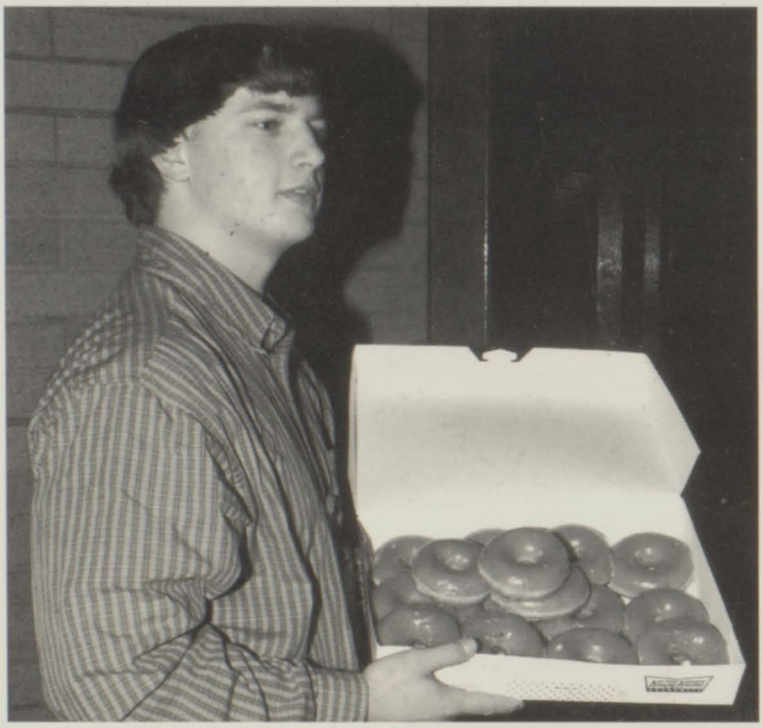

we're servin' Come knock on our door... for you

Get 'em while they're cold! This group of student council officers enthusiastically sells snowcones to students passing by. With five different flavors from which to choose, this made a great treat!

Where are the cops when you need them?! Senior co-president J.P. Shelby sells doughnuts to raise money. After he was done selling, he bought and consumed many doughnuts himself!

Just what the doctor ordered! Senior Lindsey Gaskins is the first in line to buy a tasty snowcone. In fact, they looked so delicious that senior Chad Stefano made sure to get one too!

Deck Mercy Hall with boughs of holly! Freshmen Courtney Crosby, Caroline Freliche, and Joanna Akin enjoy sprucing up the campus. These festive decorations brought a nice holiday mood!

Chocolate...it satisfies every need! Eighth grader Eleni Dermatas believes that selling hot chocolate is a great idea. It also provided a great morning rush to get ready for the school day!

Breakfast of champions! Junior Ben Pierce pours some orange juice to top off a yummy breakfast before an exam. Council members responsible for serving the students were greatly appreciated!

I saw the sign! This hanging sign definitely opens up the eyes of students who walk under it. Sophomore Valkyrie Anderson's help made the winter decorations wonderful.

Do you need anything? Senior Mary Heenan assists senior Becky Kersey to make her comfortable while donating blood. She offered the donors cookies and juice provided by the Red Cross to revive them.

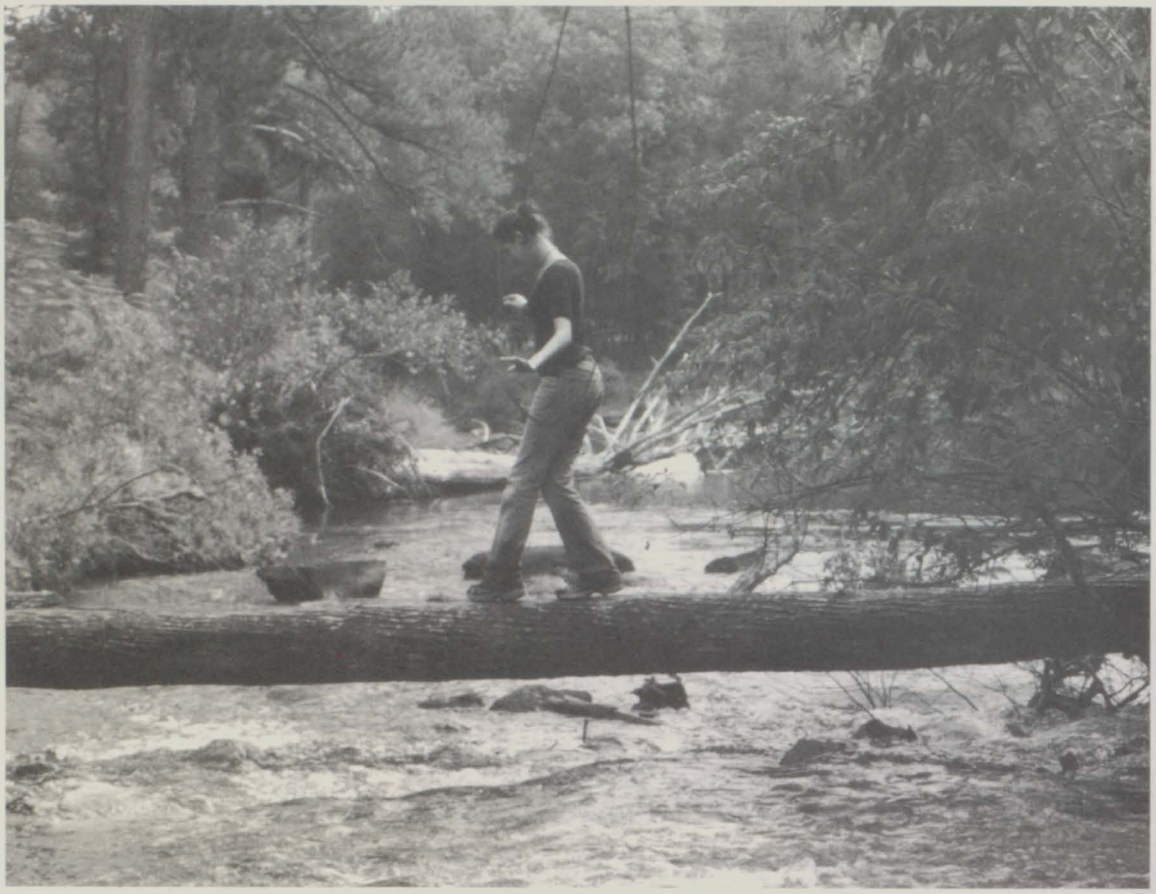

Oh, this is going to look so pretty! Seventh grader Drew Cosey decorates the Medical Center Children's Hospital for Valentine's Day. The cut out hearts helped to welcome any new patients.

Thinking globally what do we do now? acting locally

With perfect posture... Senior Lindsey Gaskins practices walking across a fallen down tree during the hike at Highfalls. At Highfalls there was a cookout, hike, and games like frisbee.

Mmm, mmm, good! Senior Chad Stefano takes a huge bite out of his delicious hamburger cooked on the grill at Highfalls. The Environmental Club provided members with hotdogs, hamburgers, chips, cookies, and soda.

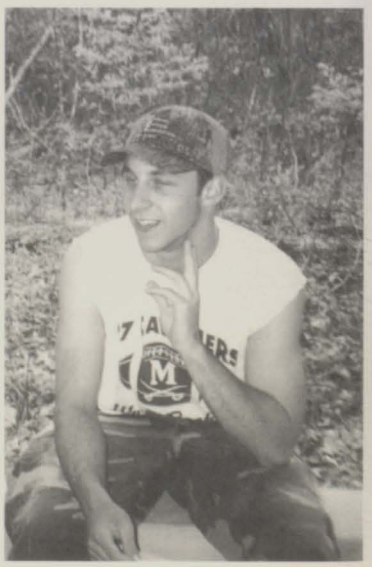

Don't rock the boat, don't tip the boat over... Sophomore Haley Huckabee enjoys canoeing so much that she has her own kayak. The canoe trip down the Ocmulgee River was tiring, but everyone had a great time.

Ninety seven beats per second... Senior Patrick Cassidy checks his pulse after an invigorating hike at Brown's Mount. The students cut kudzu and had an adventure to help save the environment.

Let's get ready to rumble... Coach Midkiff expresses his excitement over the next event. Each grade competed against other grades in various games, hoping to claim the title of Fun Night champions.

Rising to the occasion... Members of the Sophomore Class race to build a human pyramid. The race was timed and competitors had to stay in position for two seconds before the clock was stopped.

You are getting very dizzy... Seventh grader Trey Purvis spins round and round during the Dizzy Izzy relay. The objective was to spin around ten times then run to the other side of the gym. It seems easy, but Trey knows otherwise.

Run, run, run... Freshman Ryan Graycheck runs to the other end of the gym trying to win the Dizzy Izzy event for the Freshman Class. Running down the court with the gym spinning was very challenging for most people.

Battle of it's not just fun and games... the classes

You can do it! A group of freshmen cheer on their fellow classmates during the tug-of-war. Even though each team tugged their hardest, the seniors walked away with a victory in that event as well as the overall competition.

lunchin 'n' making the time for... loungin'

Whazzup! Underclassmen Drew Edwards watches Senior Spencer Stull in amusement as they wait in line to pay for their delicious spaghetti lunch. A little clowning around made the line seem shorter.

Room for one more? Seniors Amanda Ferrara, Lanier Sammons, and Sarah Harrison prepare to leave campus to eat at their restaurant of choice. Seniors always enjoyed exercising their off campus privileges.

So what are we looking at here? Senior Jayme Potts studies diligently for an upcoming English poetry quiz during her free period. Students often used this time for last minute studying.

Obey your thirst! Juniors Kimberly Rockmore and Kimberly Thomas enjoy their time at lunch with lots of laughter and sodas. There is nothing like a little caffeine to keep you going.

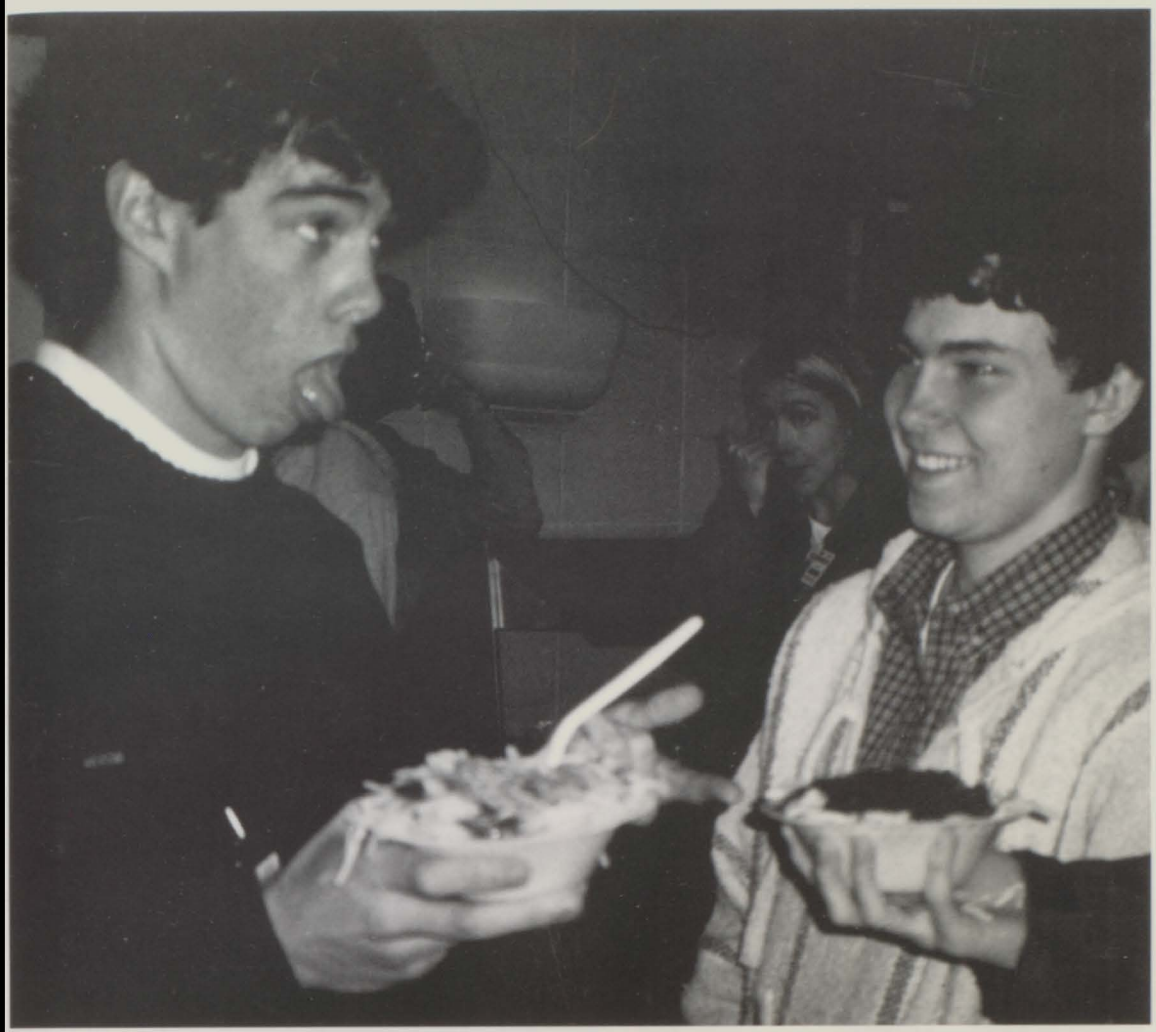

Smile even though... Tommy Dunn, Nahshon Bigham, and Taylor Ware still have the rest of the school day to finish, but with the thought of Christmas break in mind, the time goes by quickly.

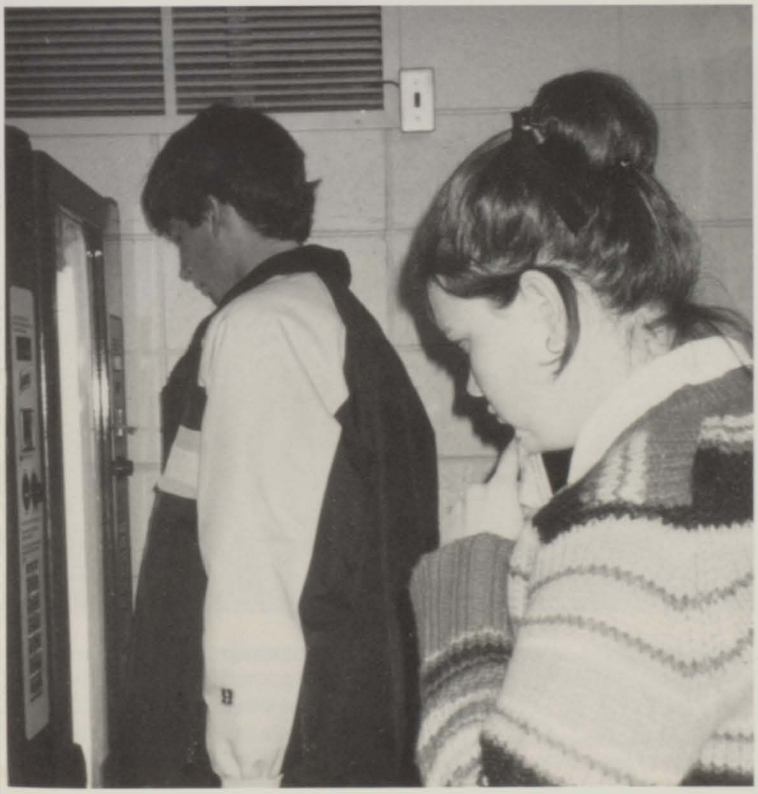

Cha-Ching! Matt Lorge, Kristen Taylor, and John Paul Shelby wait patiently to pay for their meals during lunch. Many students find it hard to stand in line because of their growing hunger.

'Tis a rare occasion... When Middle School students Sarah Deep and Kibby Pearce are allowed to eat in the trapezoid. Normally, the seventh and eighth graders are required to eat in the cafeteria.

Crunch 'n Munch! Sophomore Jason Spicer chows down on a scrumptious chicken leg. Wednesdays were famous for their tasty fried chicken plates in the school cafeteria.

There's a rumbly in my tumbly! Michael Grimsley and Margo Gentry try to decide which mouth-wateringsnack to purchase. Students often chose junk food over a nutritious meal.

"Mount de Sales Academy has a student group that has no problem bragging on their school."
- Junior Haley Crawford

Take it from me, MDS is the place to be. Sophomore Franklin Smith assists a family in finding information regarding attendance. Cavalier ambassadors played an important role in recruiting new students for the school.

Today's game plan is to smile, smile, smile. Mr. Coates gives a few last minute instructions before parents and students arrive. Preparation allowed the ambassadors to give interesting and informative tours.

Top-Bottom (l-r): J.Cunard, C.Stallings, F.Smith, L.Sewell, K.Williams, K.Croom, H.Huckabee, E.Meriwether, B.Punziano, L.Hattaway, J.Leverett, K.Coates, K.Leverett, L.Wood, J.Cooper, K.Beall, K.Lidstone, M.Heenan, B.Kersey, M.Adiga, A.Etheridge, T.Roberson, C.Oxley, J.Robinson, E.Pittard, G. The tour was great and they loved what they ate. Junior Charlie Oxley shares words of advice with a new student's father. Refreshments gave parents and students an opportunity to experience MDS hospitality.

Going this way, going that way, MDS is the only way. Sophomores Katie Hatcher and Audra Nessing gear up for a tour. The tours always began in the breeze way and ended with an introduction to Sr. Rosina.

Got Sodas? Coach Slocum wheels cases of Coca-Cola products to a waiting car in the senior parking lot. The gym was filled with drinks that the students sold to friends and family.

Sally Foster wrapping paper keeps going and going and going... Eighth grade volunteers David Bartlett, AJ Son, and Adam Ehalt show the quantity and quality of Sally Foster's products.

Bringing home the savings. Seventh grader Hannah Albert takes a short cut through the trapezoid to get her wrapping paper to her car. Many families could not wait for their goods to arrive.

Who said that apples and oranges don't mix? Coach Davis lends senior Carla Paschke a helping hand with her fruit order. The truckloads of fruit symbolized the students' dedication to fundraising.

Have a Coke and a smile! Seniors Georgia Ragonetti and Michelle Bentley show their commercial know-how by posing with a favorite soda. Students like them made the Coke sale a successful event.

family Nothing but a... affair

Let's do lunch. Sophomore Terence Heenan and his mother, Ms. Heenan, enjoy lunch together in her room. This served as a good way for the two to keep in touch and share school happenings over a nourishing lunch during the busy and hectic school day.

Hurry or we'll be late! Seventh graders Austin and Reeves Maddox hurry to Mrs. Brown's religion class. Between going to lockers and navigating crowded halls, sometimes four minutes just was not long enough to get to class on time.

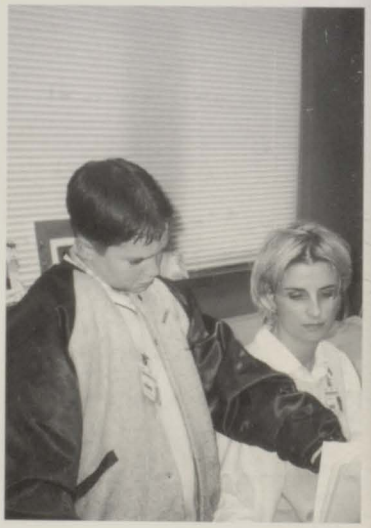

Which one is which? Nobody can tell senior twin sisters Jenny and Carla Paschke apart, or tear them apart! These two attended Mount de Sales since eighth grade and became familiar faces around campus.

We are family! Sisters Kristen, a junior, and Jenny Croom, a freshman, are all smiles when it comes to spending time together at the Kiwanis canned food drive. The Croom sisters joined the Key Club this year to show that teamwork starts at home.

Mother knows best! Since seventh grader Lane Banbury's mother works in the front office, he takes every opportunity to stop in and chat with her. Mrs. Banbury is the MDS admissions secretary.

A STATEMENT FROM THE COMMISSIONER

I would like to thank all the IWBL team members for a very successful inaugural season. Your participation, enthusiasm, and attitude made the IWBL an exciting testimony for how much fun being part of the Mount de Sales family can be. You have etched your initials on the long and storied Mount de Sales' history by becoming the first-ever IWBL participants. You have become the founders of a new Mount de Sales tradition. Thanks for your involvement in the the Indoor Whiffle Ball League.

- Mr. Midkiff

Keep your eye on the ball. Sophomore Frances Layfield steps up to the plate to get a hit for her IWBL team. Frances applied her softball skills to help lead her whiffle ball team to victory.

INDOOR WHIFFLE BALL LEAGUE STANDINGS

Fire in the Hole	3-0
Team Otis	2-1
Rabid Wombats	0-3
The Losers in Coordination with Billy Shackelford	1-2

Power Puff Girls	0-3
Sky Highs	1-0-2
Men's Faculty Team	2-1
Women's Faculty Team	1-1-1

Swing batter! Seventh grader Sam Reese takes a swing while classmate Kyle Yawn acts as catcher. These adventurous seventh graders joined the IWBL in its inaugural year, which also happened to be their inaugural year at MDS.

Score one for heaven. Father Tim rounds third and heads home to protect the faculty team's 2-1 record. Father Tim gladly offered his offensive skills in a show of support of the first ever faculty whiffle ball team.

Eighth graders celebrate... of the heart

It warms your heart and soul... Eighth grader Ashley Dempsey shows her grandparents all of the ways that she loves them by giving them her heart. The valentines that were made for the visitors were very well done and much appreciated.

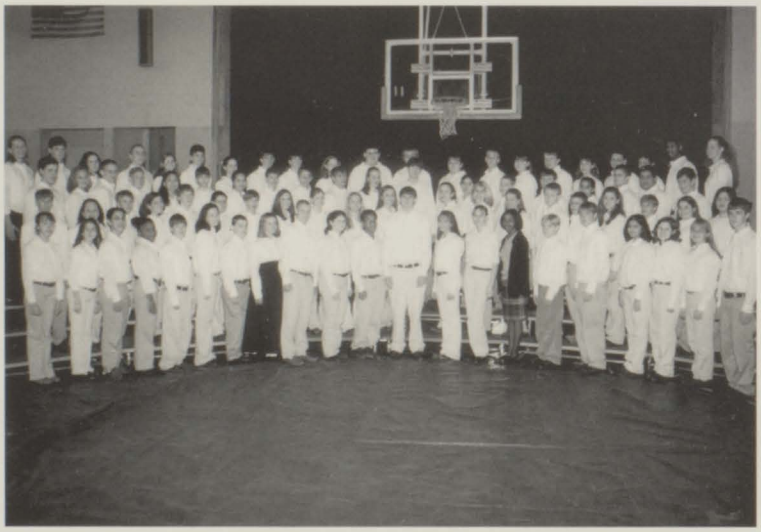

Put it together and what do you get? Eighth graders Greg Flaherty and Carla Martinez scramble around the gym to finish putting the decorations on the walls. It was a special treat for everyone to be able to see the joy on their guests' faces.

Pretty please with a cherry on top? Eighth grader Betsy Poe enjoys the breakfast that was provided for the grandparents and guests. The middle schoolers had just as much fun as their special friends.

It was unforgettable... The entire eighth grade class put on a program about the history of Mount de Sales for their grandparents, special friends, and the seventh grade. They sang many songs as an excellent source of entertainment.

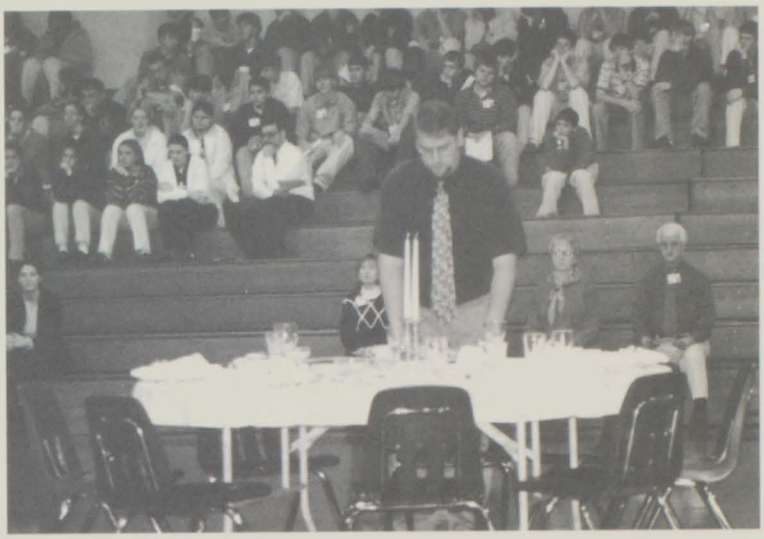

Like father, like son... Eighth grader Daniel Story tells his dad about all the heartwarming things he did for his grandparents on Valentine's Day. Parents were also invited to join in the festivities and enjoy the program.

Signs and posters will do the trick... Junior Ashley Harrison leans against the banner informing everyone that Catholic Schools Week has arrived. MDS joined schools around the globe to celebrate their focus on spiritual and intellectual growth.

Which fork do you use first? Mr. Tyner places a plate on the table during the prayer service. The teachers set the table in the name of various subjects to remind students of the many blessings they received by going to a Catholic school.

There's IHOP or Waffle House, but there is no place like here. A group of students eats the breakfast provided by the Student Council. It consisted of pancakes, sausages, and juice served to anyone who wanted to enjoy a complete breakfast.

Fresh squeezed just for you... Seventh grader Trey Purvis pours a cup of orange juice to drink during his breakfast. Students turned out in large numbers for events such as this one, hoping to enjoy them year after year.

Patty cake, patty cake... Coach Tony Pierce and senior Jennifer Nelson glance up as they finish cooking sausage patties for the breakfast. Coach Pierce must have added his own seven herbs and spices since they were so tasty.

Why doesn't anyone else think that was funny?! Mrs. Haddix cannot understand why no one else gets the French teacher's joke. Her advanced knowledge of the language made the guests feel at home.

Cheese! Seniors Lea Mitchell and Brittany Graham smile before returning to non-stop chatter with their French guests. Some students collected addresses of their new friends to stay in touch.

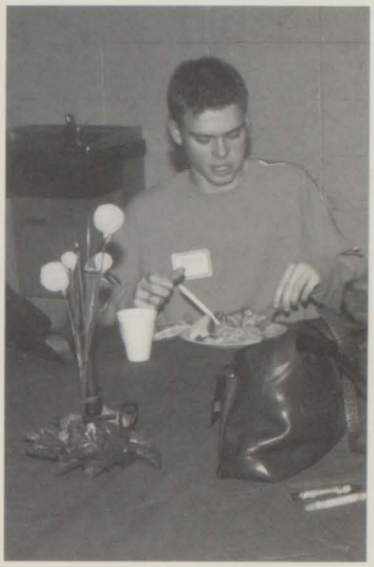

Do you want to talk to my new friends? Freshman Matt Norfleet gets ready to pass his cell phone to his French buddy at dinner. The banquet was held to allow casual interaction between students of different cultures.

Pass the food, please! Several students scoop large portions of scrumptious food for their plates at the international banquet. Guests truly enjoyed the pot luck dinner provided by the parents.

Let's give them a round of applause! The French boys enjoy the performance given by the MDS choir. The chorus appreciated the international acclaim for their vocal talents.

Stand and take a bow! These French students dance and sing to different styles of music at the assembly. They gave an awesome performance that definitely called for a standing ovation.

Oooh it's so good! Sophomore Terence Heenan devours his food at the international banquet. Everybody understood good food, no matter what language they spoke.

Would you like to sit here? The chorus eagerly invites the French students to rest on the risers after giving a marvelous performance. Students took this chance to ask each other questions about their cultures.

destination: going back in time... egypt

It slices, it dices, it cuts cardboard with ease. Junior Leah Hattaway busies herself with some beginning preparations for a night in Egypt. Cardboard, crepe paper, and paint created the illusion of the sands of Egypt.

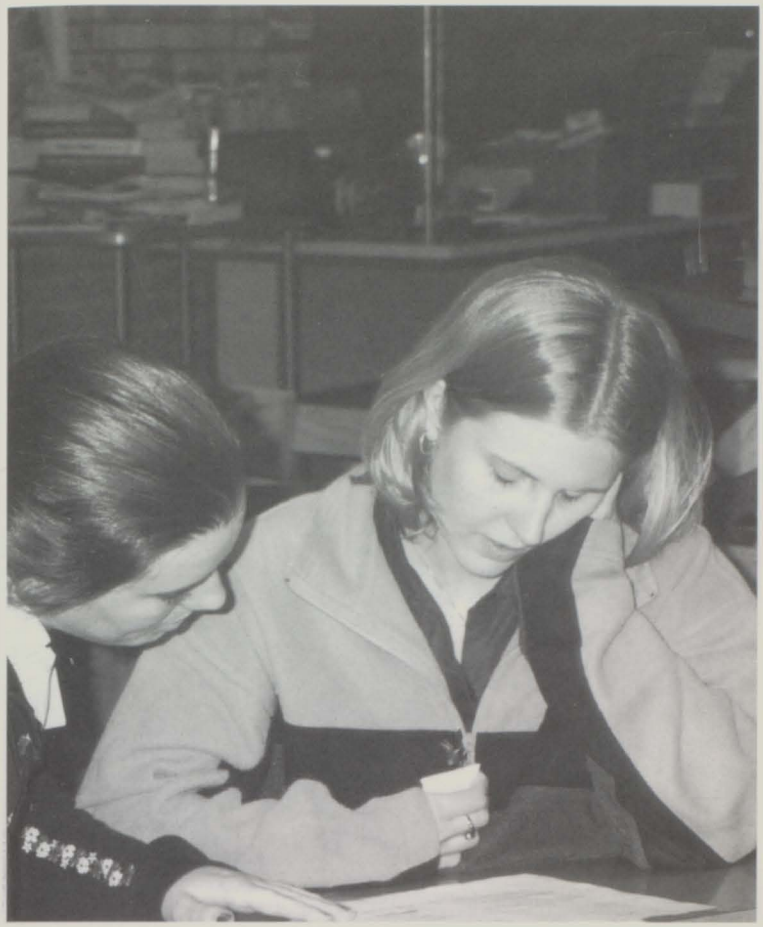

Building the eighth wonder of the world. A group of juniors piece together a pyramid to go with the prom's theme. As the hosts of this year's dance, the juniors gave up personal time to make the event memorable.

We came, we saw, we measured. Juniors Tala Katner, John Cacavias, and Ashley Harrison make sure the newly constructed column is just right. Details such as these left lasting impressions on all who attended the prom.

The magic of the night couldn't be put into words. Juniors Kimberly Kelsey, Anna Stiff, and Lydia Sewell examine some great prom themes. All of the terrific ideas made choosing just one a difficult decision.

Decisions, decisions. Juniors Erin Coleman and Sarah Burch scrutinize decoration plans that were made almost two months before the prom. This class transformed the Macon Centreplex into the Nile.

Queen of the Nile! Junior Amy Laughter is truly the queen of art. Her many Egyptian models gave prom the atmosphere of the African Nile. The extra effort from many artists brought Egypt to life.

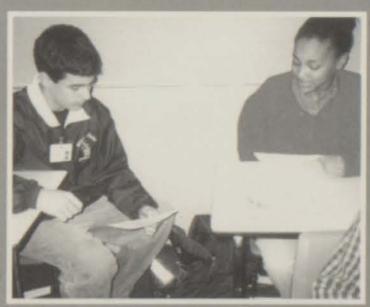

Sticky business. Junior Hamilton Hardison places tape on the back of a column decoration. Students like him woke up bright and early to go to the Macon Centreplex to do their part.

Controlling Your Destiny: Prom Promise

Prom Promise (l-r): Royce Collins, Audra Nessing, Brittany Hartley, Emily Pittard, John Hurley, Kristin Taylor, Nick McClendon, Adreanna Jackson, Kirk Davenport

Making every decision count. Junior Nick Dermatas looks at his prom promise card during homeroom. Prom promise was not just a commitment made by juniors and seniors, but one that was made by all grades.

Just Say No! Junior Jenika Cooper reads over her prom promise letter. These sheets warned students not to drink and drive or ride with an inebriated driver.

Guidance and leadership from a wise voice. Rev. McDaniel delivers a compelling speech to MDS students. He spoke on drug awareness and the dangers of drinking.

a night in egypt

Dancin' the night away...

Livin' la vida loca! Junior Alan Crowell and sophomore Rachel Conn boogie to some swinging music. Swing dancing, along with other favorites, made the night enjoyable for everyone.

Cheese! A group of junior girls pause to take a picture so they can remember this special night. Picture taking was one of the most popular prom activities since everyone wanted to remember the magical night.

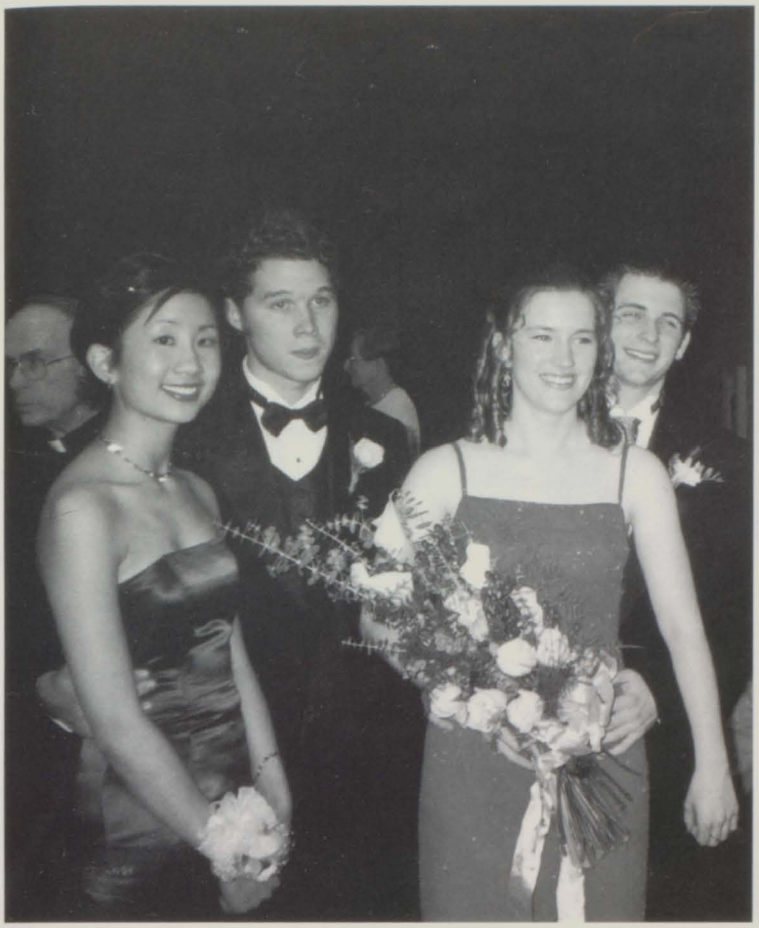

Cel-e-brate good times, c'mon! Students fill the dance floor and dance to their favorite songs. The music, along with time spent with friends, created a great time for everyone.

To the left, to the left... Both seniors and juniors dance to the most popular music. Dancing only added to the fun that dinner, pictures, and after prom experiences created.

Pretty as a picture... Seniors Janelle Joe and Kate Haney take a picture with their dates so their senior prom can be remembered. Formal attire created a fairy tale atmosphere and a magical evening.

Machomen... Juniors Nick Dermatas, Michael Grimsely, Andy Arena, and John Cacavias strike a pose for a quick snapshot. Smiles like these were seen all around as students enjoyed dancing and being with friends.

Don't trip! Senior David Rumph and junior Anna Stiff stop at the end of the runway to take a picture. The great Egyptian decorations were highlighted during introductions at lead-out.

Friends forever! A few friends gather together to celebrate this special occasion. Memories and dances under an Egyptian sky made the night an incredible and everlasting event.

Top 10 funniest things to do after prom

10. Go to Waffle House
9. Go to Kroger and throw toilet paper
8. Go to an after prom party
7. Chill at a friend's house
6. Run away from parents trying to spy on you
5. Go cow tippin'
4. Ride around in your mom's car wishing you had a limo

happy, happy, Together, the school sings... JOY, JOY

Just one more step... Senior Timothy O'Mahony tries to reach out and set the beanbag marker down. Pulling against a strong bungee cord was fun but difficult at the same time.

This one is going to hit the target! Freshman Jessica Willis winds up to pitch the ball at the dunking booth. Teachers volunteered to be in the tank while students tried to dunk them in the water.

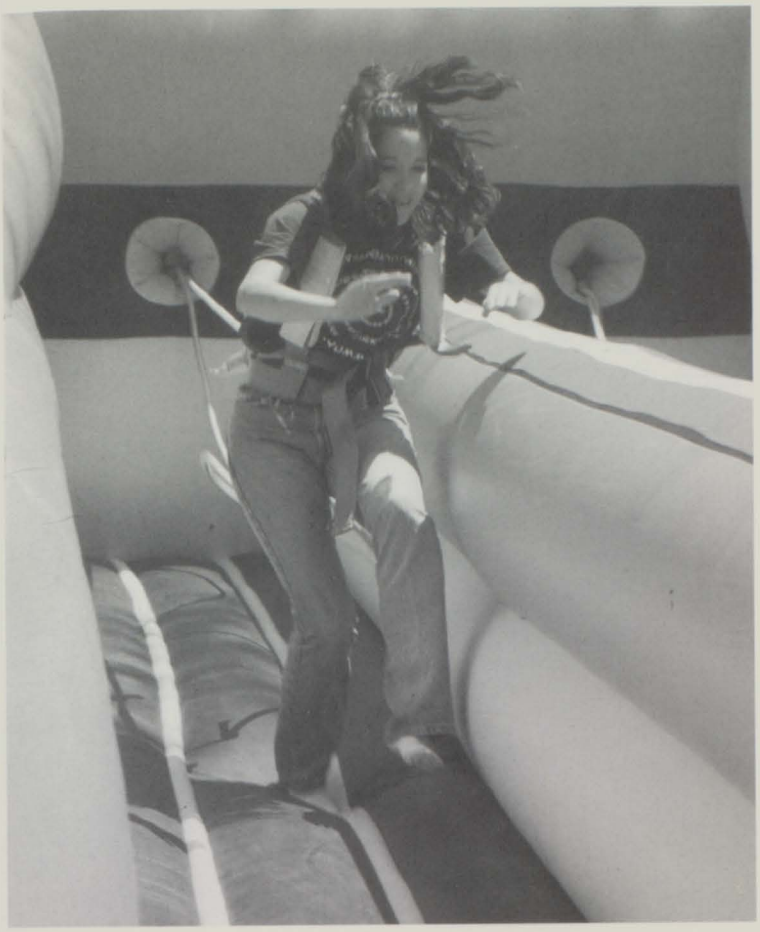

Chew, chew, swallow, swallow. Senior Phillip Raines eats his blueberry pie as fast as he can in order to be the champion pie eater. Every grade had one person representing them in this contest.

You're not going to knock me off! Sophomore Alan Cardwell fights his opponent, trying vigorously to knock him off by using jousting sticks. Each match consisted of three rounds in order to determine the winner.

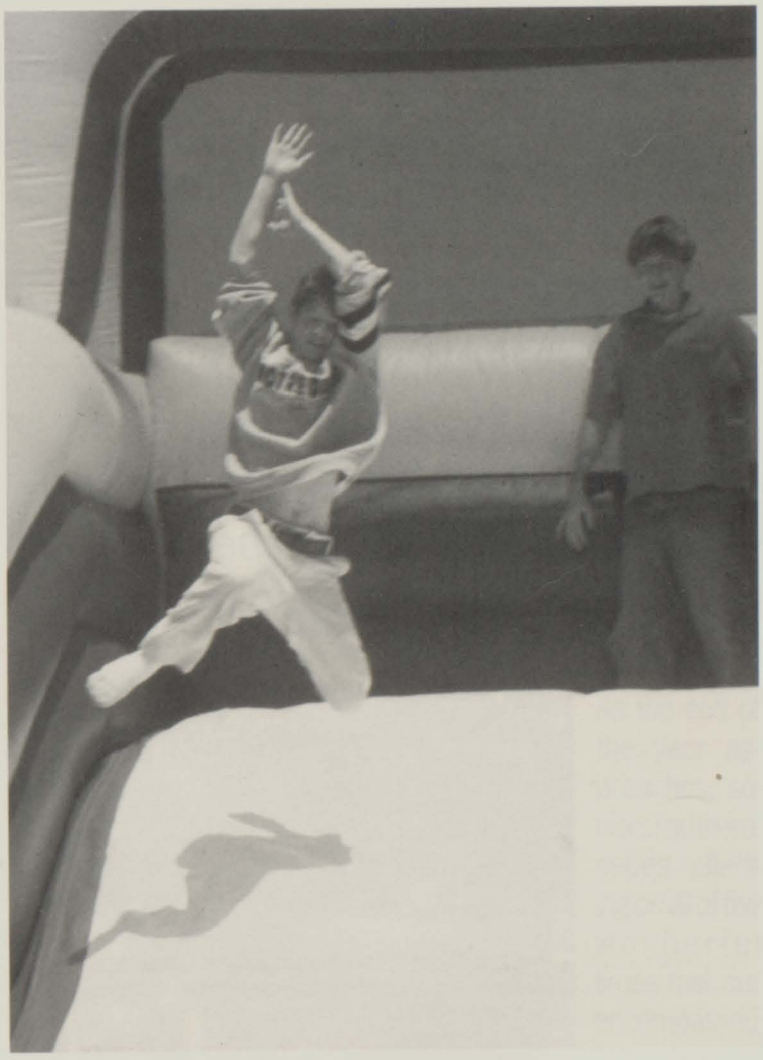

I think I can. Freshman Jeannine Olivier fights against physics as she tries to pull against the bungee cord. This contraption locked the contestant into a harness and made her run against an elastic cord.

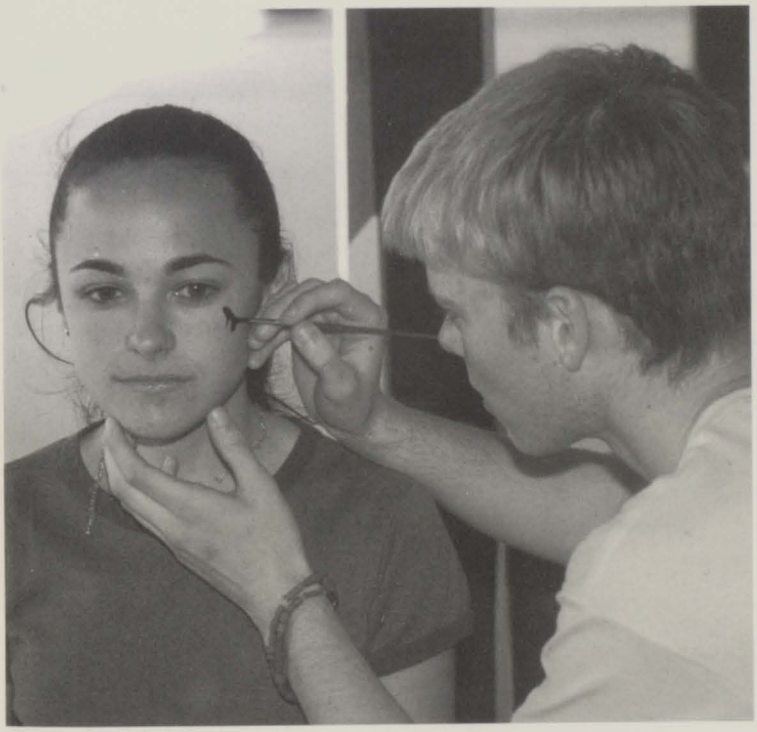

Up, up, and away. Senior Chad Stefano goes up for a spike in volleyball. A volleyball tournament was held in the gym all day long while other festivites were held outside.

Just don't look down. Sophomore Matt Webb does his best to reach the top of up the rock wall. The wall offered easy, medium, or difficult climbs for every level of experience.

Hold still, don't move an inch... Sophomore Jessica Robinson patiently waits for the completion of her face painting by Terence Heenan. The face painters were trained after school during the week prior to Happy Fun Day.

Geronimo!!! Freshmen Joey Shackelford and Wesley Moulton get ready to head down the 25-foot slide. This huge, inflatable slide offered those who slid down a cross between a large slide and a trampoline.

"ADVERTISING IS LIKE LEARNING- A LITTLE IS A DANGEROUS THING."
-SAMUEL ADAMS

From our first steps to our final walk across the stage to receive our diplomas, our lives have been touched by many, many people. Parents and family, friends and mentors- all have gathered around us to share in the reaching of one destination- graduation. And all have taken advantage of the opportunity to say one final good-bye as the door of our high school careers closes. Through words and pictures the messages our loved ones wish to leave us become set in stone, forever imprinted in ink so that no matter where life takes us, what doors we walk through, and what destinations we reach, we will forever be reminded of those who have helped us along the way.

As the end of the year approaches, seniors find themselves reflecting on all of the wonderful times that are encompassed in the year.

Pushin' horns weren't easy like the movies said it was.
You worked hot and tired and nasty, rode your pony's head too low.
There were all the nights you couldn't sleep 'cause it was too darned cold.
And you'd sing Strawberry Roan and Little Joe.

So when you see that cowboy he's not ragged by his choice.
He's just chasin' what he really loves and what's burning in his soul.
Wishin' to God he'd been born a hundred years ago.
Still singin' Strawberry Roan and Little Joe.

Goals are dreams and wishes that are not easily reached.
You have to work hard to obtain them,
never knowing when or where you will reach your goal.
But keep trying!
Do not give up hope.
And most of all…
Never stop believing in yourself.
For within you
there is someone

We wish you continued success as you take the next step in your life. Stay focused and keep your passion strong. We are very proud of you and wish you all the best in life. You will always be our precious Little Angel. We love you so much.

With All our Love,

Mom, Dad, and Wesley

Good luck "Shellie"!

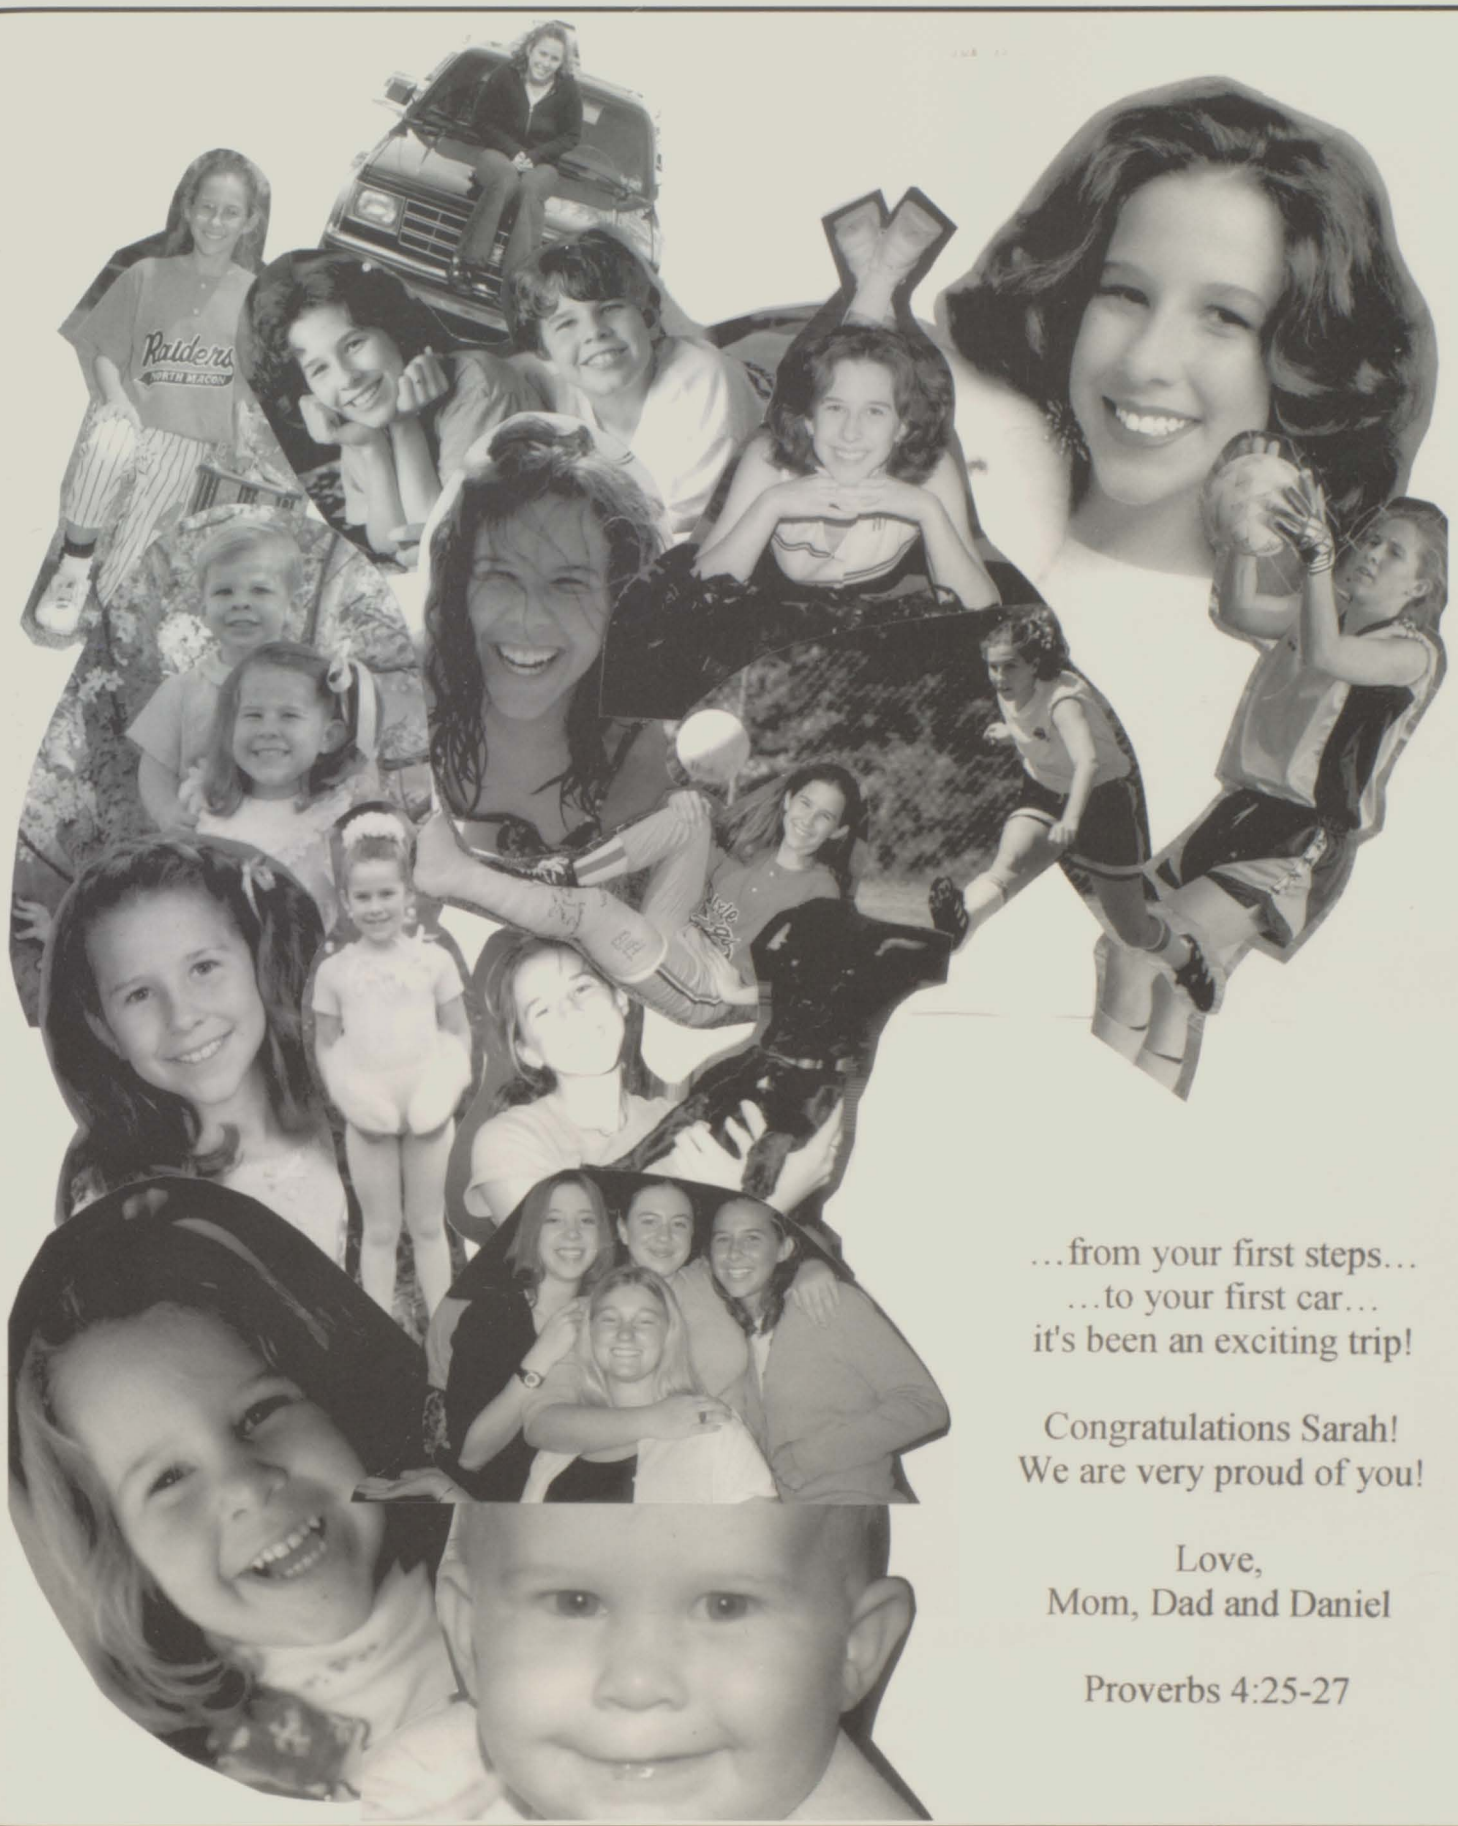

Kelly,

You potty-trained yourself at 18 months and from that moment on you have given 100% effort in everything you've done.

We're so proud of you! We Love You and will miss you so much!!!

Love,
Mama, Craig, Cris, and Kendall

...from your first steps...
...to your first car...
it's been an exciting trip!

Congratulations Sarah!
We are very proud of you!

As you head out into the world, always remember that we love you and...

"I hope you never lose your sense of wonder. I hope you still feel small when you stand beside the ocean. Give the heavens above more than just a passing glance. And when you get the chance to sit it out or dance-- I hope you dance."

Love, Mama and Daddy

Janelle,

We're so proud of you and your accomplishments! We know and believe that you will continue to set the right goals and strive to reach those goals. And in that process of formulating and striving, remember the LORD has been with you and has carried you along the way. HE will always be there.

We love you,

Mom, Daddy, and Jonathan

Kelly,
Congratulations on all your many high school achievements!

This is just the beginning!

Keep your great attitude always!

Love,
Dad & Shirley

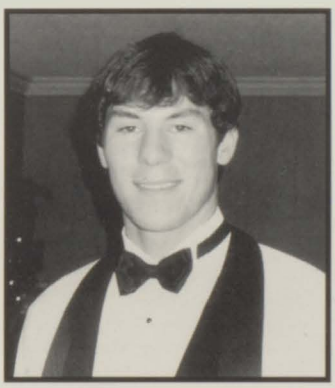

Attitude

"The longer I live, the more I realize the impact of attitude on life. Attitude, to me, is more important than facts. It is more important than the past, than education, than money, than circumstances, than failures, than successes, than what other people think or say or do. It is more important than appearance, giftedness, or skill. It will make or break a company... a church... a home. The remarkable thing is we have a choice every day regarding the attitude we will embrace for that day. We cannot change the inevitable. The only thing we can do is play on the one string we have, and that is our attitude... I am convinced that life is 10% what happens to me and 90% how I react to it. And so it is with you... We are in charge of our attitudes."

JENNY

Separately and together-
And wish you the best in what lies ahead.

We love you always,
Mom and Dad

You are our Sunshine
Our only Sunshine;
You make us happy when skies are gray.
You'll never know, dear, how much we love you,
So please don't take our sunshine away.
- Mom, Dad, John, and Brandon

CONGRATULATIONS JENNY & CARLA!

From that first day when you came creeping down the stairs to the day when you walked across the stage to recieve your diplomas, you have continued to touch our lives. We are so proud of the young women that you have become.

Love always, Ray & Carol

Remember when you used to talk all night
You never got much sleep
Talked about planning out your lives, and who you'll grow up to be.
Things are so much different now; your lives have changed so much.
But you better always believe that you'll be Friends Forever...

Congratulations Lanier and Julia!
Good luck in New York.

We love you,
and are so proud of you.

You are an original.

Mom and Dad

There never has or ever will be another person just like you.
The best thing you have to offer
the world is yourself.
Prize yourself.
Build on your strengths.
Celebrate who you are.

Live a lot, love a lot, laugh a lot, and from it all, learn a lot!

one door closes... another opens

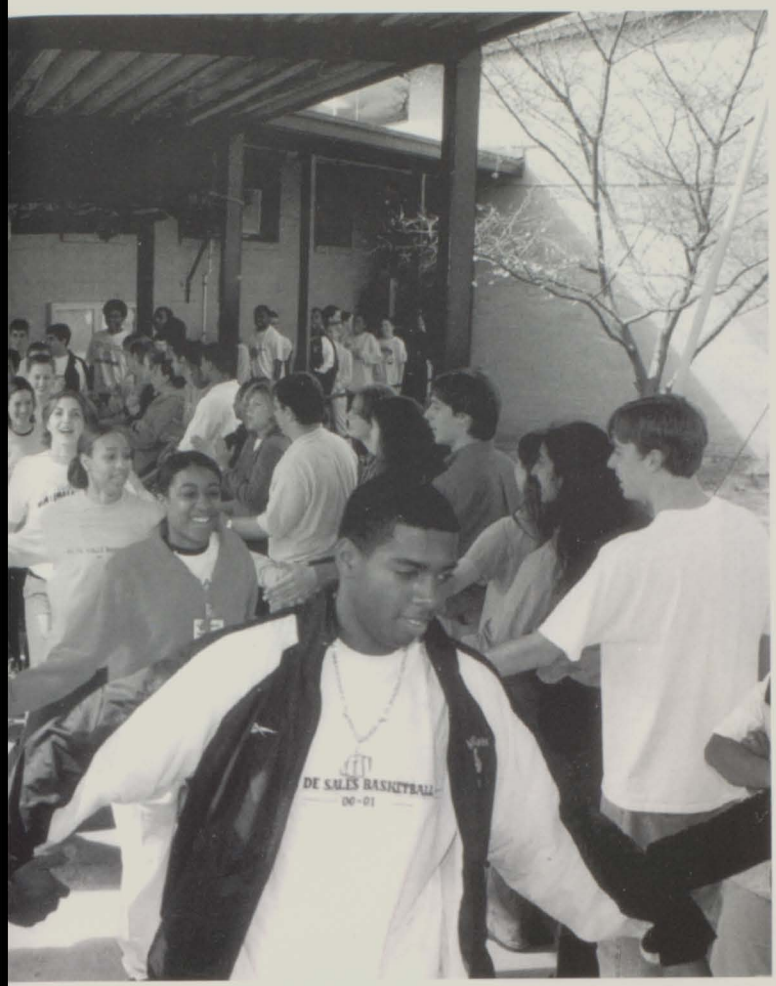

"There will come a time when you believe everything is finished. That will be the beginning."
-Louis L'Amour

All good things must come to an end. So is it with every school year. We can never go back; each of us is on a one-way street to the future. We can turn around and see from where we have come, but when it comes to walking, our feet only move forward. If you do turn around though, you will see millions of doorways. There is one for every high school experience, for every time in your life you stopped and said to yourself, "Wow." Every tear and every laugh went into constructing these doors. In looking back and seeing them all lined up in a row, smile and look ahead of you. For every door behind you on your great journey there are five others just waiting for you to reach out and turn the knob, waiting for you to reach the incredible destinations just over the threshold.

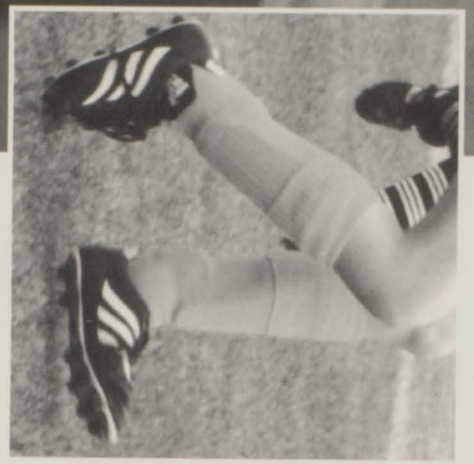

As the school's doors close in expectation of new ones opening, remember the milestones of the past year that affected the course of our lives.
